Lift Every Voice and Sing II: An African American Hymnal (LEVAS) is an official Episcopal hymnal which may be used along with or in place of The Hymnal 1982. This hymnal broadens the musical styles available to a congregation by drawing upon the long history of music composed and sung by African Americans. It contains Spirituals, Traditional and Contemporary Gospel Songs, Protestant Hymns, Missionary and Evangelistic Hymns, and Service Music, so its reach is broader than only African American music. See more information about it here, including the text of any LEVAS hymn <https://hymnary.org/hymnal/LEVS1993> .

Some hymns are in both LEVAS and The Hymnal 1982, but they usually have different arrangements: “Go tell it on the mountain,” “Were you there,” “Let us break bread together,” “Go Down Moses,” “There is a balm in Gilead,” “O sacred head, sore wounded.”

Discussion questions:

How does African American music speak to you differently from other music through its text themes, music style, and rhythms?

What more can you offer about this style from your experience as a singer, musician, or listener?

How often do we use this style at GHTC? Recent examples that come to mind?

How well do you like it? Would you like us to use more or less of it?
