Engagement for All in Online Learning: Enticing the Learner

Hosted by Brian Green

Engaging students in the learning process increases focus and attention promoting more meaningful learning experiences. However, with remote/hybrid learning, ENGAGEMENT is one of our greatest challenges. In this PD Short, teachers will experience strategies and routines to capture student attention - right from the beginning. Participants will explore ways to entice students into the lesson with clear expectations and pathways for success, and investigate powerful approaches to sustain motivation from start to end. Educators will leave with a pocketful of ideas, plans, blueprints, and strategies to raise interest, and attention. This session is the first in a set of three. Attend one or more in this set about Engagement in Online Learning. Subsequent sessions scheduled for January 27th and February 3rd. Register by clicking the dates.

Audience: Teachers Grades 3-8
