Remote Learning & Behavior: Getting Started

Hosted by Dorothy Leone

With many of the typical behavior management strategies once used in the classroom impractical through a computer, innovative ways to support student behavior are necessary in the remote/hybrid learning environment. This PD Short will offer participants ideas about how to create a positive behavior support intervention system for students learning in a remote setting. The session will discuss the importance of setting up proactive strategies, discovering the root of the behavior, and incorporating family members to help create a positive environment for all learners, particularly those with special needs.

Audience: All Teachers
