Engagement for All in Online Learning: Inciting the Learner

Hosted by Brian Green

Engaging students in the learning process increases focus and attention promoting more meaningful learning experiences. However, with remote/hybrid learning, ENGAGEMENT is one of our greatest challenges. In this PD Short, teachers will work together to incite students to be more self-motivated in their learning. Participants will explore ways to create and use choice boards, self-reflection tools, and methods for embedding self and group assessments. Through strategic, timely and effective feedback, students will be motivated and incited toward greater success. Educators will leave with a pocketful of ideas, plans, blueprints, and strategies to raise interest, attention, and interaction. This session is the third in a set of three. Attend one or more in this set about Engagement in Online Learning.

Audience: Teachers Grades 3-12
