

Craig McCurley became Harvard's Treasury director in 2007 after previously serving as the University's Central Bank Manager. Craig joined Harvard in 2004 after receiving his Masters in Public Administration from the Harvard Kennedy School (HKS). Prior to attending HKS, Craig was a financial institutions investment banker at Bear Stearns and Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. Craig has an MBA from Columbia University. Before attending Columbia, Craig worked for KPMG in London. He has an undergraduate degree in Classics from Exeter College, Oxford.