

“Finding Jesus”

In Pursuit of a Dream

Emmanuel Kwesi Darfour was 7 years old and living in his grandmother’s care when ECM took him under our wing. He was one of the first orphans we rescued in Ghana.

Kwesi loved conversation and music. He played drums in church and also enjoyed studying the Bible, memorizing Scripture, and leading devotions and prayer time. Most of all, he looked forward to receiving pictures and letters from his sponsors.

Kwesi loved school. He was very inquisitive and thrived in a learning environment. After finishing ECM’s Haven of Hope Academy, he attended Senior High, where he became a Student Leader and continued to excel.

Thirteen years after coming to ECM, Kwesi is pursuing his dream. He is studying at the University of Ghana hoping to become an Agricultural Scientist. His life goals are far-reaching. Recognizing that Ghana’s agricultural sector is much greater than other countries, this pioneering young man intends to develop new methods so Ghana can produce enough food for themselves, as well as other countries in need.

Kwesi is thankful that ECM “found” him because it is through us that he found Jesus. “I am so grateful to have Jesus Christ as my Savior. He is my all-in-all. Without Christ, I don’t know what I would do.”

“I want to thank ECM and my sponsors for making me a somebody, for making my life mean something, and for the support they have given me to reach this stage. I pray that God will put that act of kindness on your heart to continue to help people.”

Having been pulled from the trenches of poverty through ECM’s ministry, Kwesi is anxious to pay it forward. We are certain his goals will be realized as he continues to seek God for guidance and trust in His provision.
