

ASHI VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

Chang Liu, MD, PhD
Washington University School of Medicine in
St. Louis, Barnes-Jewish Hospital

What committee(s) do you serve on?

Science & Technology Initiatives Committee (STIC),
ASHI Quarterly Editorial Board, 2024 ASHI Annual Meeting Planning Committee

How did you get started as a volunteer for ASHI?

I was initially on the waitlist and would be happy to serve on any of the ASHI committees. The first opening for me was the Directors' Affairs Committee in 2020. I jumped in and have been a proud ASHI volunteer since then.

How has volunteering for ASHI improved your professional development?

It has been an incredible experience working alongside so many brilliant professionals to advance what we care about collectively. In this process, I met many new friends, mentors, and collaborators who profoundly shaped my scientific views and career.

What is your most memorable volunteer moment? Many memorable moments involve sharing interesting but different or even conflicting ideas, having potentially awkward discussions, and creating a fantastic final product. This could be a complex survey, a beautiful ASHI Quarterly issue, or the upcoming Annual Meeting. It is not easy but always satisfying in the end!

Why do you think it is important for others to volunteer with ASHI?

Volunteering with ASHI will help you grow – come and grow your knowledge, experience, and friendship.
