

ASHI VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

Matthew Cusick, Ph.D., F(ACHI)
University of Michigan Medicine

What committee do you serve on? Quality Assurance & Standards and Publications Committee

How did you get started as a volunteer for ASHI? When I started my director-in-training program, we were encouraged to participate on ASHI committees if the opportunity arose.

How has volunteering for ASHI improved your professional development? ASHI committee work has had a profound impact on my professional development. The committee work allows you to learn more in depth about the issues that the community faces. Furthermore, you are exposed to various perspectives which is an outstanding opportunity to learn from the many experts in the field.

What is your most memorable volunteer moment? There are so many since serving on the QAS Committee is very exciting! I would say my favorite moments have been getting to know/ become friends with numerous people that I have served on these committees with.

Why do you think it is important for others to volunteer with ASHI? There are a couple of basic reasons: 1) These committees give you an opportunity to learn your craft at a higher level. 2) They allow you to have an impact on a national level. 3) They allow you to network with various people throughout the country.
