Pivoting to Meet the Challenge: Development of “Virtual” New Collaborative Experience Training

Since the onset of the Corona virus, live training of the New Collaborative Experience (NCE) training—the basic training required for all new members of CLI—has been put on hold. Consequently, there are several new members who haven’t been trained and who are probably wondering when the heck the NCE training will be available. Rest assured the CLI Training Committee is on it!

The Committee is developing a new “virtual” NCE training that should be available in early 2021. This training will use a Zoom meeting and/or Zoom webinar format and will likely consist of one full-day training followed by 2 or more 1/2-day training modules. We are taking this opportunity to make qualitative and quantitative improvements to the training, and as you might imagine, this is a big project.

We appreciate your patience as we make this transition. Meanwhile, for those new members who are anxious to obtain training sooner rather than later, we recommend you search the IACP Event Calendar (<https://www.collaborativepractice.com/community-event-calendar>) for other virtual trainings offered from around the country. Having said that, it would be important to take the new virtual NCE training when it is available to learn the Minnesota character of Collaborative Practice.

Stay tuned!
