

What is the Mobile Response Team?

Mobile Response Team is a short-term program comprised of a team of clinicians who can support youth in crisis when there are concerns for immediate safety. MRT supports youth and families by completing a comprehensive risk assessment to determine level of risk, needs of the youth and to explore strengths of the client, family, and community supports. MRT works to facilitate the creation of a safety plan to support youth and their caregivers to minimize the instances and severity of future crises. MRT supports youth with linkage and advocacy in order to connect them and their families to long term services if needed.

When do families or youth typically call MRT?

Crises can look different for everyone. Any instance where a youth or their caregiver feels there are immediate safety concerns to the youth or others is an appropriate time to utilize Mobile Response Team.

Some examples include:

- Youth is feeling suicidal or making suicidal statements
- Youth is engaging in verbal or physical behaviors which are or might hurt self or others
- Youth is severely depressed and needs support
- Youth feels like and/or is threatening to runaway
- Youth is hearing or seeing things that caregiver does not hear or see
- Caregiver feels that the youth is “out of control” and needs support or feels that youth may pose a danger to self or others

Who is eligible for MRT services?

Children and adolescents who live in Contra Costa County and have Medical or are uninsured are eligible until their twenty-second birthday. Transitional-aged youth between eighteen and twenty-two are eligible provided there is an adult willing to support in instances of crisis.
