

The Cameron Peck Photo Collection

A Limited Opportunity to Own Archival Prints of Historic Images of Lake of Bays and Support the Lake of Bays Heritage Foundation

Cameron Peck, a Chicago native who spent as much time as he could at Lake of Bays, was a lover of classic Muskoka boats. He started collecting in 1935, buying only the best examples and restoring them to their original condition. By the time he sold his collection in 1952 he owned 25 launches, 4 steam yachts, and 68 marine engines.

Peck also assembled an archive on classic boats and Lake of Bays life that included 1500 photographs. Mark McLean, a past president of the Lake of Bays Heritage Foundation, is turning this history into a book. Mark has curated the Cameron Peck Photo Collection: 13 exquisite photographs from the Peck Archive. The Collection includes Navigation Company boats like the Iroquois and the Algonquin, the Portage Flyer train, and Peck family members having fun on everything from a vintage rowboat to a 1926 Minett. The photos were probably taken by Cameron Peck himself – or in some cases, by his mother, Janet, an avid photographer.

The prints in the collection are of the highest possible quality. The photographs will be printed from digitally corrected versions of the original negatives on watercolour paper using the platinum-palladium process. Invented in the 1850s, platinum-palladium prints have a rich and delicate tonal scale and unmatched archival quality. Bob Carnie, a Toronto-based photographer with an international reputation for fine art photo printing, has been commissioned to produce the Cameron Peck Photo Collection. He will sign each print on the back.
