The Pittsburgh A. Philip Randolph Institute (APRI) Education Fund is affiliated with the national organization, A. Philip Randolph Institute; however, this separate 501(c)(3) works to provide programs that extend democracy, education, and opportunity to those traditionally disenfranchised or discouraged from participation. the local APRI Education Fund offers community-based programming focused on improving employment opportunities for the traditionally disenfranchised. This is largely due to their relationship with the United Steelworkers (USW), who strongly desire to empower people through workforce development. Therefore, they partnered with APRI to provide predominately African American communities with skills that would lead to meaningful employment.
