

Excerpt of letter from Ivan Torres, founder of Crab Island Rum, Puerto Rico to Bill Owens, President of American Distilling Institute:

I have been working on this project since 2013 and before that, from 2009, I was a moonshiner. I have a strong feeling that the craft industry is an excellent opportunity for a small community like ours. I had a lot of help and support from friends and family and now, more than ever, I don't want to let this project die.

I estimated the loss from the hurricane at about $30,000. I lost 3 large, brand new rolling doors, the roof sealer treatment with insulation, a new control panel for the still, my propane installation for the boiler, a couple of windows, 2 cisterns with their water pumps and all the business that I will not be able to do until the electricity and the tourists come back. As I mentioned in the phone conversation, I was about to do my first legal distillation when Hurricane Maria arrived. At the same time, we were working with the Puerto Rico Development bank for a line of credit for rum production.

Immediate equipment needs:

- Hand and electric tools
- Barrels (used, charred oak)
- Bottles and caps
- Labels
- Labeling machine
- Sanitary Hoses and fittings 1 ½"
- Activated Carbon
- Control Panel
- Other miscellaneous items such as buckets, funnels etc.
- Polishing filter for finished product
- Lab equipment:
 - Hydrometers
 - Thermometers
 - PH meter
 - Water conductivity meter
 - Hydrometers for Brix
 - Heating mantle
 - Boiling flask
 - Glassware
 - Scale
 - Burettes
 - Beakers

Among the equipment that suffered no damage is:

- 300 gallon still
- 300 gallon SS fermentation tank
- 15 HP Fulton Boiler
- An osmosis water filter
- A carbon filter
- A bottle filling machine
- A 1½" alcohol transfer pump
- 3 SS tanks for alcohol storage

Any other item you think I can make a use of at the distillery would be very welcome. This is just a list I made of things that came to my mind. I did not add a generator because I think that is asking for too much. If someone wants to send a donation I have paypal accounts:

Whatever economic help I can get will be used to repair the damages suffered by the hurricane. Again, I appreciate any help [to get us up and running]. We welcome you [and our fellow distillers] to our island of Vieques at Crab Island Distillery.

Best regards,

Ivan
