Apps For Individuals on The Autism Spectrum

There are hundreds of apps available for people with autism. Each individual will benefit from different apps for different reasons. We recommend that you search for the skills you are trying to address. We have divided our chart into 8 categories: General, Assessment, Behavior Management, Communication, Language/Writing/Math, Schedulers/Organizers, Sensory/Relaxation and Social Skills

*This chart contains a sampling of apps for individuals on the Autism Spectrum. It does not list every app available. New apps are developed every day. No warranty is made about the accuracy or completeness of the information on this chart. Customers should consult the iTunes Store for detailed information about the apps.

Restoring a House for Every Body

Half a century ago, Marc Harrison built a prototype for a home that would accommodate people of all ages and abilities. Now his daughter has restored it. The building, was laid out to accommodate anyone who might have mobility issues or use a wheelchair. Not that you would notice those accommodations. Most of them are hidden in plain sight. "Marc looked at everything through the eyes of the disabled body, and he believed if he solved the issues for a disabled person, he would have solved the issues for everyone"

How Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Programs can Raise or Lower Stress in Your Organization

On a surface level, the way DEI programs lower stress is obvious: For example, by creating a sense of belonging. When employees feel like they are being treated fairly and without bias, they are less likely to feel stressed and anxious about their job. This can lead to increased productivity and a more positive work environment

Bionic Leg Sleeve May Help Tens of Millions
Thirty-five million Americans with mobility challenges such as cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, stroke and spinal cord injuries could soon benefit from an invention called the Cionic Neural Sleeve. The sleeve, designed to be worn on the leg, is sometimes referred to as "bionic clothing." Developed by Jeremiah Robison, founder and CEO of the San Francisco startup company Cionic, and the father of a girl with CP, the neural sleeve makes it easier for individuals with gait impairments to walk more fluidly and more securely.
