

As we approach the final weeks of the year, our Jewish tradition reminds us that we need to bring more light into the world. We do so by lighting candles together with our loved ones, and we can also let the light in by bringing hope, love, peace and kindness into our families, our schools, our communities and our broader world.

Even these darkest, shortest days of winter are warmed and brightened by all of the ways that Camp Tavor is bringing light into the world.

Tavor is bringing light into the world by working to ensure that every camper - including our family camp campers! - understands that they can be a leader within our camp community, and they can make a difference and bring about change in our world.

Tavor brings light into the world by inspiring our high school Tzedek leaders to bring their passion and vision to local social change work.

Tavor is bringing light into the world by providing opportunities for our chanichimot (campers) to connect with broader social movements like this summer's Close The Camps vigils and this fall's Climate Strikes.

And we've been so moved by the light and love you've shared with us this giving season through your donations on Giving Tuesday and through your generous response to Nathan Wojcik's letter asking you - as members of the "great Tavor Kvutzah" - to continue practicing kupah by supporting Tavor. If you haven't already done so, please consider helping us burn a bit brighter and letting our light shine further by ensuring a robust scholarship fund this year!

Shabbat Shalom,

Amit
