

Rain Cloud in a Jar Experiment

Although splashing in puddles on a rainy day is super fun, this rain puddle craft brings that idea to life but staying indoors! While you will have to help little ones hold their paint brush and help glue shapes down, you're helping to build and work those important fine motor skills!

What you need:

- Coloured construction paper
- White cardstock paper
- Scissors - *Adult use only
- Different shades of blue paint and/or blue puffy paint
- Paint brushes
- Loose craft glitter
- Tape/white glue

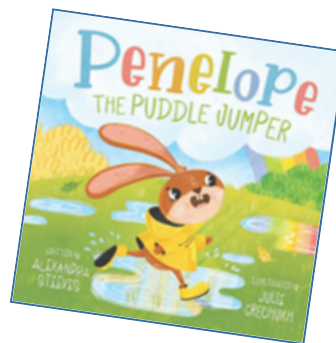

What to do:

- 1.*Adult use only – using the coloured construction paper, cut out pairs of boots and cut out different shapes in different colours for the little ones to glue to their pair of boots.
- 2.On a piece of white cardstock, have little ones paint their own rain puddle using different shades of blue paint.
- 3.Sprinkle some glitter on top of the wet paint
- 4.Glue the boots to the puddle and lay flat to dry before proudly displaying!

Activity extension: You can first read a picture book like “Penelope the Puddle Jumper” and have a conversation to spark their creativity, curiosity and connection to the story. For example, you can ask

- Do you like jumping in puddles?
- What sound do you think jumping in puddles makes?
- Can you show me your best puddle jumping?
