

Edible Campfire

Bring the magic of campfire fun indoors—no flames required! This simple, hands-on snack lets little campers build their own mini campfires using tasty ingredients. It's a fun mix of creativity and treat time that ties perfectly into your camp-at-home adventures and a chance to talk about some campfire safety!

What you need:

- 2 Tbsp of peanut butter (or peanut butter substitute) You need enough to cover the bottom of the bowl/plate where the campfire will be so that everything else can stick on.
- 1 Graham Cracker
- 1 Rice Krispie bar (or popcorn/caramel corn)
- Half apples worth of apple slices
- Shredded carrot pieces

What to do:

- 1.Create the base with the peanut butter – this holds everything in place, but it also represents the “dirt”, clear of dry debris or grass, which means it’s a safe place to start a fire.
- 2.Create your rocks and tinder. To create the rocks, break off pieces of Rice Krispie and try to make it into a rounder shape (great activity for little hands)!
- 3.Crumble the graham cracker in the center to represent the dry and small tinder.
- 4.Place the “logs” – place the apple slices on top of the graham cracker. You can stand them up together or just stack into a small pile.
- 5.Add the “Flame!” Place the carrot shavings in and around the apple slices to represent the flames of the campfire.

*Adapted from the thecrazyoutdoormama.com

weewatch.com

