

Arkansas One Health Community
Becky McPeake, Wildlife Extension Specialist

The Arkansas One Health Community is comprised of state and federal agencies and partners from human, animal, and environmental health sectors across the state. The Centers for Disease Control has a One Health Office and website which encourages such efforts. The Arkansas community meets periodically with updates about zoonotic diseases impacting the state. A zoonotic disease is an infection which is spread between people and animals. Examples of wildlife-related topics which the committee has discussed include rabies, avian influenza, and tick-borne diseases. Meetings can be attended in person or virtually. If you would like to receive zoonotic disease updates and meeting notices, contact Laura Rothfeldt, DVM, DACVMP, Stater Public Health Veterinarian, laura.rothfeldt@arkansas.gov.
