The Motorcar Parts of America – Selwyn Joffe Scholarship Award Program – Awards for Automotive High School Teachers

The oftentimes forgotten individuals in educating and training students in preparation for automotive careers is the high school automotive teacher. Whether it's their use of personal funds to keep their programs going or their need for certification to keep their instructor and program status, CAWA wants to assist them in achieving success.

The Association has established a scholarship program to help these teachers in several ways, including financially.

CAWA represents manufacturers, distributors and retailers that could supply these high school automotive teachers with products, tools and other resources for classroom use to assist them in providing relevant, up to date and quality education and training for their students. Access to industry training being conducted by CAWA members could be made available to the automotive high school teachers for their own knowledge and development.

Teachers that are interested in applying for a scholarship should complete an application for consideration, found on the Association's website, www.cawa.org or request an application from programs@cawa.org.

Note: The University of the Aftermarket Foundation was instrumental in providing the necessary start-up funds to establish this program.
