Health Equity Response Team

COVID-19 & racism

Not all Coloradans are experiencing the COVID-19 pandemic the same way. There are factors at play for who gets tested, who gets treatment, and who is able to practice social distancing. During this pandemic, we are likely to see the loss of life from racial disparities, and action must be taken.

People of color are disproportionately likely to be exposed to the virus in low-paying "essential" jobs; are more likely to have limited access to affordable healthcare, childcare, and transportation; are more likely to live in neighborhoods with high air pollution rates; and are more likely to face unsanitary conditions in prisons, jails, and detention centers. Due to these types of inequities, people of color face chronic disease health disparities, leaving them with a higher risk of dying due to COVID-19.

On April 17, Governor Polis established the COVID-19 Health Equity Response Team, headed by the Office of Health Equity. By forming a Health Equity Response Team, Colorado can focus specifically on tackling these inequities to prevent the state from widening and ultimately ending lives. This Response Team will work to
