Dear Parents,

During this week, we discussed rules, and why they are important. We discussed rules in the classroom, in our homes, and government rules. We read stories such as "Visiting the Past," "Government Rules," "Setting the Rules," and "American Symbols." We reviewed skills such as making predictions as we read and before reading, cause and effect, and recognizing multiple-meaning words. The genre covered this week was expository text.

During math, the students seem to be having lots of fun as they measure things around the classroom and using non-standard and standard units to measure. These lessons are going pretty quickly as well. We will continue with Chapter 8 next week. The students will continue to measure, they will subtract in inches, and they will use a measuring tape to measure.

Next week I will focus on social studies for the four days that we are meeting. We finished units A and B in science and I would like to introduce the new unit during a regular week. During social studies, we will cover citizens, our government, and special Americans and their contributions. The students will be tested on this knowledge. We will also discuss the Constitution of our country.

COMING UP...
