Hello, Parents of Rainbow Door!

This week the children learned all about the weather, and what a wonderful week to learn this. We were able to experience warm weather, rainy weather, and even some cold weather this week. We spoke about which type of clothing is used for the different types of weather and which items are important, as an umbrella when it rains. The letter of the week is the letter "S" as in sun.

For art the children were able to trace, color, and decorate the letter "S". They were also able to make their own thunderstorms by using black and yellow paint, cotton balls, and glue. They made umbrellas by using markers, pipe cleaners, and coffee filters, and last but not least the children here at Rainbow Door were able to make their very own rainbows! For this project, the children used cotton, construction paper, and glue.

The stories we read this week were: A Windy Day by: Melvin and Gilda Berger, Do I Have to Wear a Coat? by: Rachel Isadora, Come on Rain and When the Storm Comes by: Linda Ashman.

Parents, please remember to continue to practice with your child at home, repetition is the key to a successful learning experience. Please help your child in learning how to hold a pencil or crayon correctly. Also, remember to wash your child's blankets and return to school on Monday fresh and clean, and to label anything that belongs to your child. Also please cut your child's nails so they don't scratch themselves or their friends,

Quote of the week: "You can not use up creativity. The more you use, the more you have". By: Maya Angelou.

Child of the week starting Monday, January 24th is "Mateo Montoya".

Have a wonderful weekend!
