Description

The Office of the Solicitor-General for the Cobb Judicial Circuit has created a project to develop a community outreach program designed to communicate and teach the dangers of driving with the added issues of cell phone usage and the uptick in drug and alcohol consumption amongst young drivers. This project requires the development of presentations that could be delivered by attorneys from within their office. To this end, the office is in search of two interns to research and construct viable presentations for the education of high school age students. Interns would be using PowerPoint, video recording and editing equipment, along with legal research and communication skills, to organize the lectures and coordinate the appropriate law. Interns would be tasked with interviewing judges, attorneys, and legislators and lobbyists like MADD, and potentially victims and/or defendants to discuss the varying topics; and then merge the discussions into the presentation.

Qualifications

The intern should have experience in creating presentations, including PowerPoint. Candidates with knowledge or interest in video editing, journalism, communications, and/or criminal justice are preferred.
