My Dearest Blanket Angels!

Did you read our recent newsletter article about Stitched Together, our newest partner? Lots of our readers did! Stitched Together is the Columbus-based organization that includes our blankets in the Hope Cases they give children entering foster care.

People like to know where our blankets are going!

We know this because we use a service called Constant Contact to send our emails, and one of their “data analytics” features allows us to see which links our readers click. The link to the article about Stitched Together was the most clicked in the whole newsletter!

We believe this means that our supporters want to know what happens to the blankets they make and the people who distribute them – people like you! We often receive photos and brief stories from the blanket angels who live in Central Ohio, and we include as many of them in our social media posts, newsletter and website as we can.

Because you can’t drop by the workshop to deliver blankets and chat, we look forward to hearing from you by email, phone or letter. We especially like to see your photos and the stories that go with them. It could be a photo of yourself making a blanket, other blanket makers at work, photos at the agency where you donate (even the agency sign would be good), and anything you might know about the agency’s work.

YOU are an important part of My Very Own Blanket, and we want to stay in touch even if we never meet in person. Please consider sharing your story with us so we can share it with our other supporters. A photo and few sentences about it would be great. You don’t need to be a great writer. Just jot down the important information, and we’ll polish it. Thank you for allowing us to share your stories of love and hope, so others can also be inspired by the work you are doing in your area for children in foster care!

Grateful and thankful for you,

Jessica Rudolph
