People of the Past

Dee Brown

(Dorris Alexander Brown)

Born: 29 Feb 1908

Alberta, Louisiana

Died: 12 Dec 2002

Little Rock, Arkansas

Parents: Daniel & Sarah "Lula"
(Cranford) Brown

Spouse: Sara "Sally" Stroud

Children: Lt. Colonel J.

Mitchell Brown & Linda Brown

Occupation: Librarian, Author, and Historian

Brown's father died when he was five years old; his mother moved Brown and his siblings to Stephens, Arkansas where she became the local postmaster. In 1924, the family moved to Little Rock where Brown attended Little Rock High School. While living in Little Rock, Brown admired a Native American baseball player for the Arkansas Travelers. (This player would often throw baseballs to the kids that could not afford tickets to the games.)

After graduating high school in 1927, Brown relocated to Harrison, Arkansas where he gained employment as a printer and journalist for the Harrison Daily Times. While living in Harrison, Brown borrowed a Model T car to take a drive to Jasper. During his visit to Jasper, a bank was robbed; Brown was falsely accused of the crime. He spent the night in the Newton County jail. The next day, he discovered the man who falsely accused him had stolen the tires to the borrowed Model T. In 1928, Brown left Harrison and enrolled at Arkansas State Teachers College (University of Central Arkansas.) He graduated in 1931 with a Bachelor of Arts and Education Degree with a major in History. He then began a long career as a professional librarian. Brown used his education and admiration of the Native Americans towards writing award winning novels. His book, Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee, sold over 5 million copies world wide. Brown stated the best compliment he ever received for this book was from a Native American: "You didn't write that book. Only an Indian could have written that book!" Visit the Boone County Library to read the works of this great author.

Mrs. Tina Farmer, Boone County Library Genealogist

Hours are Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. 870-741-5913

Boone County Genealogical Society meetings are held at the library the second Thursday of each month at 5:30 p.m.

Community members are welcome.

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month

During the month of October, the Boone County Library will have on display materials pertaining to breast cancer. You will find resources on screenings, support groups and options, and a whole lot more! Information will be located in the display case by the ground floor stairway. Thank you to North Arkansas Partnership for Health Education (NAPHE) and Dr. Dan J. Hawkins' Community Health Resource Center for providing these free resources to our community.
