

MORGAN SHARES HER TRANSFER KNOWLEDGE

Heading off to college is an exciting next step of your life! Once you begin college you may find out that the one you picked is just not right for you, or you just don't enjoy the campus life like you thought you were going to.

If you decide to transfer colleges, they are a few steps you need to do in order to transfer:

Start by applying to whatever college you want to transfer to and once you get accepted you can start the rest of the transfer process.

Next, if you live on campus, you have to go to your housing director and see if you can get out of your housing contract for the next semester.

If you cannot, that could be a costly decision. While you are doing this, they have you fill out a form on why you want to leave their university.

If you took out any loans to pay for your education, you must complete exit counseling on your FASFA. Also, if you have a loan that will be applied for your next semester from the college, you're transferring from you have to cancel that loan. You may then need to get a loan for the college you are transferring to.

Your new college will have you do an orientation, I did my through a zoom meeting since I was still at my other college. After you go through your orientation then your allowed to schedule your classes with your advisor.

Since I was still up at college, I was able to communicate through email for my schedule.

This process was very hectic at first, everything needed to be done in a timely matter.

In the end it was all worth it, you have to put your happiness first.
