Christine previously worked in fundraising at Saint Saviour High School in Brooklyn (where she is also an alumna) and at the National Basketball Association where she began her career, working in licensing on trading cards and collectibles. "Over these past two years, I have taken great pride in communicating with PAL donors and supporters, expanding the outreach via email, direct mail and social media. I enjoy the challenge of finding new ways to share PAL's mission of supporting and inspiring young people with the help of the law enforcement community. Being able to share impactful stories about the importance of PAL programs and activities is also meaningful to me as have two sisters who are NYPD."
