Impact Mental Health

How We Can Make A Difference

Trauma is a fundamental aspect that can alter the way the human brain functions. Homelessness can lead people to have furthering issues with substance abuse, depression, and mental illness. (Elizabeth H., et al.)

What Does This Mean?

"Homelessness, can create a sense of trauma. It can produce a sense of isolation and distrust, which could lead to a disruption in social roles. Meaning homelessness could lead to a person feeling suspicion/ lack of trust towards others and would deny any help given. (Lisa G., Leonard Saxe, 1991)

The Homeless Action Network of Detroit, is a core resource for all things data related on homelessness. We oversee and manage our community's Homeless Management Information System (HMIS), ensuring we have accurate information on who is homeless in our community, what their needs are, and what is working to address those needs.
