Over the years, several data and information practitioners put their professional passion into a common effort to gather best practices, compare lessons, produce best practice and formalize data management frameworks for the benefit of their organizations, clients and wider society. From these different journeys, the well-known DAMA International, the EDM Council, Women in Data and the Institute of Information Management amongst others were funded with the common goal to create non for profit global communities to support the data and information management profession.

Join the panel discussion to familiarize with these realities, understand their differences and commonalities.
