MORGAN COOPER TOTAH,

Founder of Handmade Palestine

Morgan Cooper Totah is an American who has been living in Occupied Palestine for 20 years. Married to a Palestinian First Christian, they are raising two children in his ancestral town (turned city) of Ramallah.

Handmade Palestine is a social enterprise that supports over 30 artisan groups in crafting and storytelling. This fair trade initiative is life sustaining for many across Palestine. It also raises funds for another project, Mashjar Juthour, which is land Morgan and her husband transformed from degraded terrain into Palestine's first arboretum and sustainable nature preserve—a sanctuary for trees, wildlife, and community.

Morgan will share stories of their work on these projects and life in Palestine. She'll also bring crafts to share from women practicing traditional tatreez embroidery.

Through cultural heritage and crafting, she speaks about the obstacles women face in generating a basic income and also about her own family's efforts to navigate life under Occupation.
