

IMMANUEL

Broken & Loved, Saved by Jesus, Freed to Live

Being a Christian has always brought up a lot of questions – but today – maybe more? We used to be divided up into different denominations and congregations – worshipping with people who had similar traditions and experiences. But God is full of wonderful surprises, joy, and is always making all things new. We are in a time in history where people are being invited to come together – and to bring our differences and questions along – to share, to learn, to celebrate.

Many people around the world were sad to learn about the recent death of Rachel Held Evans, an inspiring, young writer. She writes honestly and openly about her struggle with and her love for the Church. Reading her words is sort of like having a conversation with a good friend – reminiscing and remembering and making sense of experiences. It's about what to do when the simple answers about being Church fall apart and yet in your bones is a longing for peace beyond understanding and a deep knowing of the unbreakable love of God.

We will soon have the book Searching for Sunday on the shelf for purchase – cost is $10 – or share the cost with a friend.

Join us for a summer read and then a book group conversation with pk on Monday, July 22nd.
