

Virtual Faculty Workshop in Mentoring Biomedical Grad Students and Postdocs

Even faculty who have mentored dozens of graduate students and postdocs can always improve their skills in mentoring. This advanced topics workshop will use lessons and cases from the Center for the Improvement of Mentored Experiences in Research (CIMER) for active learning (participation required) on the topics of 1) aligning expectations, 2) promoting effective communication and 3) promoting professional development. Interactions with your fellow faculty will help you reflect on various mentoring situations. This process will thus enhance your readiness to work with mentees and anticipate new situations. All faculty are invited to participate and since the NIH requires those on training grants and whose students have their own fellowships to be trained, your participation will make our programs more competitive for future funding.
