

Teresa Jordan, Secretary

After 12 years in New Mexico, where she applied her academic background in cultural anthropology while working for Pueblo of Zuni and as museum curator for Red Rock State Park in Gallup, Teresa Jordan arrived in Durango nearly 30 years ago with her husband and young son. She taught anthropology at the local community college. After obtaining her Colorado teacher certification, she taught high school social studies until her retirement in 2006.

Teresa and her husband John Schiffel began attending UUFD in 2000. Her past board service includes terms as Secretary, Vice-President, and President.

Teresa enjoys a home-based business selling Stampin' Up! paper crafting supplies and teaching card-making and scrapbooking. She is a member of the American Association of University Women, Durango Branch and volunteers with Days for Girls.

She and her husband John, a retired medical technologist with Indian Health Service, continue to enjoy the beauty and outdoor activities that first attracted them to southwestern Colorado. They have two adult children, a son and daughter-in-law who live in Durango and John's daughter, son-in-law, and 15 year-old granddaughter who are concierges of an historic inn in Wolf Creek, Oregon.
