Delphi Community School Corporation Superintendent Dr. Moore recently had the opportunity to participate in a meaningful community conversation alongside Governor Mike Braun and Mayor Yates at Delphi Body Works. The gathering, which included local employees and community leaders, centered on the future of education in Delphi and the vital role that strong partnerships play in shaping student success.

During the forum, Dr. Moore engaged in an open and productive discussion highlighting both the exciting opportunities and the real challenges currently facing Delphi's schools. The conversation underscored the importance of collaboration between educational institutions, local businesses, and government leadership — a partnership that Dr. Moore believes is essential to building a thriving community and ensuring that every student has access to a quality education.

"I'm grateful for the opportunity to share the great work happening in Delphi and to advocate for our students, staff, and families," said Dr. Moore. "These connections matter, and conversations like this one remind us of what is possible when our community comes together with a shared commitment to our children and their futures."

Dr. Moore expressed sincere gratitude to all who helped facilitate the event and reaffirmed her dedication to fostering continued relationships between Delphi Community Schools and the broader community. As Delphi looks ahead, school leadership remains focused on building on these partnerships to drive meaningful progress and long-term success for every student in the corporation.
