Rev. Stephen Unger - Associate Pastor
Thom Brownworth - Deacon

PASTOR NIEMEIER'S NOTE:

Dear Saints at Messiah,

It's autumn, and as I write this, we're in what folks call "the spooky season." Halloween has just passed, and we're beginning the month with All Saints' Day, but we've had the imagery of Halloween around us for weeks—no, months—in the lead-up; that mix of ghosts and ghouls and skeletons that pops up in our stores and neighborhoods every year at this time. Some of our neighbors might leave up their decorations well past Halloween—in fact, there's one house on Upper Sheep Pasture on the way to the church that has a skeleton on their doorstep year-round (the homeowners like to dress it up with seasonal hats). But we see this every year at this time as we descend deeper into autumn and closer to winter: the images of death appear to celebrate that particular "night in the lonesome October."

Autumn seems to lend itself naturally to images of death and decay. The trees are entering their winter dormancy, and their leaves are changing to bright golds and reds before they fall. The nights are getting colder and the sun is setting earlier. For farmers, it's the time of harvest—ripe vegetables and grains must be picked and reaped before they, too, begin to rot and die. The world starts to prepare for winter's long sleep. And perhaps that stirs something within us to think about mortality and death. Maybe that's why we have fun with skeletons and ghosts at Halloween. Death seems less scary when we mock it with its own imagery. But nonetheless, as the seasons change and winter's vanguard approaches, mortality does seem more palpable.

I often wonder if this is why the Church in the West placed the observance of All Saints' Day (All Hallows) on November 1, because as the world temporarily dies for winter, we are presented with the great reminder of the Church Triumphant and Christ's promise to all who trust in him: that all who believe in him shall not perish, but have everlasting life. To be a saint doesn't mean that one must have performed miracles or have lived a life free from sin or have been somehow granted that status by the church—rather, all people who trust in Jesus are saints. A saint is holy because of Christ who makes them holy. That means that all who trust in Christ are saints, living and dead, you and me included. And Christ's holy ones will live again—indeed, though they are dead to us, they are not dead, but still alive with him, for "he is not a God of the dead, but of the living" (Matthew 22:32). So on All Saints, we remember all those who have died in Christ and remember that the death and decay we see around us and the deaths that took them from us are only temporary. Just as spring follows winter, so will eternal life follow temporal death. Just as the leaves that fall from the trees bud out again when the sun's warmth returns, so will the blessed dead emerge from the grave at Christ's second coming and enjoy the great love and protection of Christ forever:

“They shall hunger no more, neither thirst anymore;
the sun shall not strike them,
nor any scorching heat.

For the Lamb in the midst of the throne will be their shepherd,
and he will guide them to springs of living water, and God will wipe away every tear from their eyes.” (Revelation 7:16-17)

So this autumn, if you find yourself walking through one of our historic churchyards, looking at one of those ancient, New England Puritan headstones faced with a winged skull, that reminder of mortality, remember the hope the person buried in that grave held for the Resurrection, for it is your hope and my hope, and the hope of all the saints. In the end, even death will die. But the saints in Christ will live forever!

On a separate note, I want to give thanks for the service of Pastor Steven and Linda Unger at Messiah in light of Pastor Unger's announcement in October that he and Linda would be leaving Messiah to go on to new things in the coming weeks. Pastor Unger saw Messiah through her vacancy and the beginning of the pandemic, and I know we are all grateful for his service then and his continued service these past three years. I am personally grateful for his friendship and contributions to the ministry at Messiah since I arrived here. And I want to thank Linda for her friendship and all that she has brought to our congregation, especially her service on the Boards of Fellowship and Evangelism, her help in connecting us with Stony Brook University, and her Women's Bible Study, which has been a great success. I am sad to see them go.

Pastor Steve, Linda: you go with my prayers, well-wishes, love, and deep thanks. You have the prayers, well-wishes, love, and deep thanks of the congregation as well, and I know they will join me in expressing it. Thank you!

In His grip,

Pastor Nils Niemeier
