Help Us Celebrate Wendell's Agricultural History

Plant a "Three Sisters" Garden This Summer!

Native Americans were living in the Wendell area as long as 12,000 years ago practicing a hunter-gatherer lifestyle. By 1000 AD, they had slowly settled into villages and were practicing agriculture in the fertile bottomlands along Marks Creek, Buffaloe Creek and Little River. They grew many crops in their garden plots, but the main ones were corn, beans and squash. These they termed the "Three Sisters" and believed they always grew best when grown together.

This summer you can help us celebrate Wendell's long agricultural history by planting a "Three Sisters Garden". This is a perfect little project for kids and grandkids to learn about our history and where our food comes from.

Seed packs and instructions may be obtained

During the Month of April at the

Wendell Museum,
122 W Second St.,
Wendell, NC

The Museum is open from 1:00 PM until 4:00 PM on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays. Whether you are a newcomer or a longtime resident, the Wendell Museum is the place to come to learn about our area's long and fascinating history.