The Historical Society will sponsor a presentation on the history of audio recording and playback by Johnny Dalton, an award-winning audio engineer and musician, on Monday March 4th at 7:30 at the UCC Medfield in the "Great Room" of the building located at 496 Main St, Medfield.

A resident of Medfield and graduate of Medfield High School, Dalton will discuss how early machines and mediums brought the wonder of recorded music into the home. There will be a demonstration of some early and more recent devices for music playback. The presentation will survey the history of how technological developments over more than a century allowed for continued refinements in the quality and sophistication of recorded voices and music.

Dalton is the owner of Kung-Pow! Recording and Mastering Studio in Medfield and works with local musicians to develop high-quality and innovative recordings. He is also the sound engineer at the new Bellforge Arts Center.

This event is free and open to the public.
