The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

Users of this digital material acknowledge that they have read and understood the MACRIS Information and Disclaimer (http://mhc-macris.net/macrisdisclaimer.htm)

BUILDING FORM 40-42 Park Street, Medfield

ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION ___ See continuation sheet
Describe architectural features. Evaluate the characteristics of this building in terms of other buildings within the community.

The double house at 40-42 Park Street (ca. 1880) is unusual in Medfield as a well preserved example of the double house form. One and one-half stories with a side-gable roof and a pair of brick chimneys on the ridge, this Victorian eclectic dwelling is three bays across and two bays deep. The foundation is cut stone set in regular courses, the siding is wood shingle, and the roof is asphalt shingle. Entries are paired in the center bay; each has a hip-roofed door hood on scroll brackets. Paired windows flank the entry bay. Windows generally contain 2/1 wood sash. There are one-story gabled additions to either side of the main block. These additions are one bay across and one bay deep, and both are on concrete foundations. The addition on the south side was in place by the 1950s; the north addition dates to about 1960. There is also a rear addition, one bay deep, on a course stone foundation.

Each side of the double house has a one-story gabled shed to the rear. These sheds (1920s, see photo), which are mirror images of one another, are each two bays across, one bay deep, and have a door on the façade and 6/6 wood sash. The sheds have plain bargeboards and the one behind #40 has exposed rafters.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE ✓ See continuation sheet
Discuss the history of the building. Explain its associations with local (or state) history. Include uses of the building, and the role(s) the owners/occupants played within the community.

This double house first appears on the 1888 atlas, on property then owned by the Curtis Estate. Daniel D. Curtis (1830-1885) was a Maine native who moved to Massachusetts in 1851. In 1853, he began working for Walter Janes (1802-1867) of Medfield in the manufacture of straw goods on North Street. Curtis succeeded Janes as the owner of the business, renaming it D. D. Curtis & Company. The business later was known as Searle Dailey & Co., Excelsior Straw Works (31-39 North Street, MHC #8, see form), and finally the Edwin V. Mitchell Company. Mitchell was the son-in-law of Curtis. [Tilden, 269, 367]

According to Tilden, Curtis built many houses for rental. The house at 40-42 Park Street appears to be an important example, as it was situated adjacent to the box mill operated by D. D. Curtis & Company and likely housed a mill superintendent or other mill employee. Due to the proximity of the Old Colony Railroad (later the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad) and the location of the central passenger depot at the head of the street, Park Street historically displayed a mix of industrial, commercial, and residential development. Coal yards were located at the foot of the street. [Owen, p.5] Also operating on Park Street in the 1880s was Gould & Company, dealers in meal, grain, flour, hay, and coal. A similar business, Blood Brothers, opened on Park Street in 1889. [DeSorgher, xiv] M. Howard Blood operated that company. Members of the Blood family owned buildings on Park Street through at least the 1920s, among them the double house at 40-42 Park Street. According to the current owner of the house, 40-42 Park Street served as a residence for the Blood family. There is a possibility that this double house is the earliest historic dwelling original to Park Street, though deed research would be needed to confirm this. The Moses B. Harding House, 41 Park Street (ca. 1817, MHC #245) was moved to its current location in the 1950s. Further research is needed to determine the residents of the double house at 40-42 Park Street.

The Sanborn map of 1933 indicates that W. K. Gilmore & Sons owned buildings adjacent to this house, located on the west side of Park Street south of the railroad depot. The company sold grain, coal, hay, lime, cement, and feed for livestock out of the Gilmore's Fuel and Grain Warehouse, 26-38B Park Street (ca. 1876 onward, MHC #244, see form). The company also built the warehouse now known as 59 Park Street (ca. 1930, see form). Gilmore's (as it is now known) is located at the town center in Walpole. The town's water service cards, however, indicate that the owners of 40-42 Park Street included Martha E. Blood et al., then Raymond H. Blood, Marina (?) Welch, and William Mann. This suggests that the Blood family retained ownership of the double house at 40-42 Park Street after selling the adjacent commercial building. Deed research for the house and the adjacent commercial properties is needed to confirm.
