FROM: The White House

SUBJECT: Alaska House Bill 381 and Senate Bill 280

DATE: May 1, 2026

The White House Office of Intergovernmental Affairs strongly supports Alaska's House Bill 381 and Senate Bill 280 to advance the Alaska Liquefied Natural Gas (AKLNG) project. This project has the potential to strengthen domestic energy security, provide long-term economic benefits to the State of Alaska, and reinforce the United States' role as a reliable energy supplier to allies in the Indo-Pacific.

Given the scale and complexity of AKLNG, a stable and competitive policy environment is critical to the project's success. Clear and predictable tax policy will improve feasibility, attract private investment, and help secure final commitments. This approach promotes job creation, expanded economic activity, and durable public revenue.

Beyond its state impact, AKLNG also carries important national and geopolitical benefits by expanding reliable U.S. energy exports and reducing reliance on less stable supply regions.

We appreciate your leadership on this federally aligned approach on HB 381 and SB 280. We encourage continued collaboration among state, industry, and federal partners and remain committed to supporting responsible energy development that benefits both Alaska and the nation.

Deputy Assistant to the President
Director of White House Intergovernmental Affairs
Alex Meyer