

Stacey Landberg, M.S., CCC-SLP, is a speech-language pathologist with over 20 years of expertise in early intervention, specializing in home visiting and family-centered care. She advances the field by preparing the next generation of professionals through university lecturing and delivering professional development. Stacey is a sought-after presenter on topics such as caregiver coaching, routines-based intervention, neurodiversity-affirming practices, childhood apraxia of speech, and the impact of screen time. In 2020, she founded Coach2Coach in partnership with the Infant Development Association of California, a program that continues to enhance the coaching skills and confidence of early intervention providers. A graduate of the USC/CHLA LEND Fellowship, Stacey also contributed to California's statewide initiative to expand trauma-informed and social-emotional screening practices for infants and toddlers.
