

The Disturbed Girl's Dictionary
NoNieqa Ramos

Fifteen-year-old Macy records details about her daily life, including her cheating mother, imprisoned father, two loyal best friends, and a brother trapped in Child Protective Services.

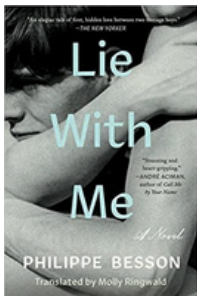

Bath Haus
P.J. Vernon

Oliver is perfectly happy in his marriage to Nathan, but follows another man into a private room in a gay bathhouse anyway. Oliver barely escapes that room with his life, but telling Nathan would mean disaster.

Breathless
Jennifer Niven

Claudine has goals in mind for her future when she moves with her mother to a remote island off the coast of Georgia. But then she meets Jeremiah, and her anti-romance plans go awry.

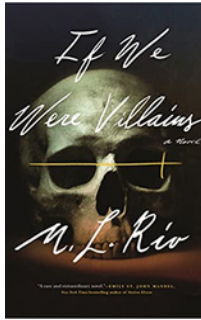

Lie With Me
Philippe Besson

Philippe sees a boy who looks like his first love and his memories are transported back to the time of their passionate, secret affair.

Velvet Was the Night
Silvia Moreno-Garcia

Maite and Elvis are both investigating the disappearance of Leonora for very different reasons. When they start to work together to uncover Leonora's secrets, danger inevitably follows.

If We Were Villains
M.L. Rio

Oliver explains to the detective who put him in prison that he may or may not have killed a fellow Shakespearean actor in college.

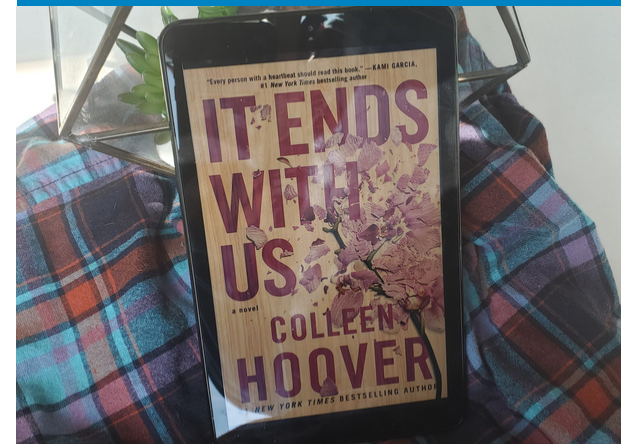

She's Too Pretty to Burn
Wendy Heard

Teen photographer Veronica is exploring the underground San Diego art scene with her new girlfriend Mick and her best friend Nico when they get caught up in criminal activity.

If You Like Colleen Hoover

Mud Vein
Tarryn Fisher

Senna doesn't know how, but she's been abducted and locked in an unfamiliar house. The only way to freedom is to play a dangerous game and take a close look at her past.

The Subtweet
Vivek Shraya

Hardworking musician Neela thinks she might finally get her big break when internet-famous Rukmini covers her song, but jealousy and a subtweet quickly complicate the situation.

The Switch
Beth O'Leary

Leena, from London, and her grandma Eileen, from a tiny Yorkshire village, switch places to find new perspectives on life and maybe some romance.

The Last Romantics
Tara Conklin

An elderly poet describes the inspiration behind one of her poems, the story of her childhood experiences with her three siblings.

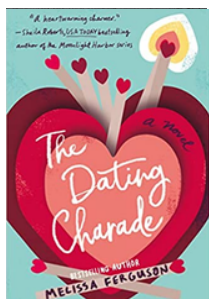

Under the Whispering Door
TJ Klune

Wallace spent his life making himself and others miserable, but now that he's dead, he suddenly wants much more out of life.

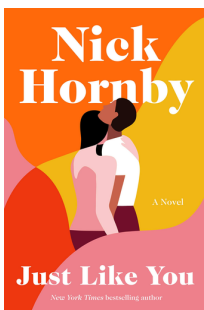

The Me I Used to Be
Jennifer Ryan

After being released from prison, Evangeline returns to her family's farm where she must convince her handsome arresting officer that she's innocent and clear her name.

The Dating Charade
Melissa Ferguson

Cassie and Jett go on a date and discuss how unprepared they each are for children. Then they're each given three children to look after. Now they have to lie to one another about their newly acquired kids.

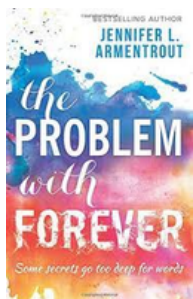

Just Like You
Nick Hornby

Lucy has been predictable all her life, which earned her a teaching career, two sons and a divorce. Now, she'll have to decide whether to continue to do what everyone expects or start taking chances.

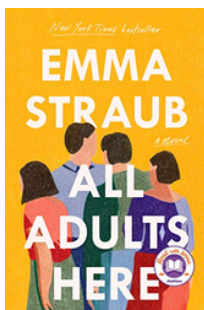

The Beach Street Knitting Society and Yarn Club
Gil McNeil

When her husband dies right after asking for a divorce, Jo makes a drastic move with her two sons to her grandmother's seaside town and takes over her knitting shop.

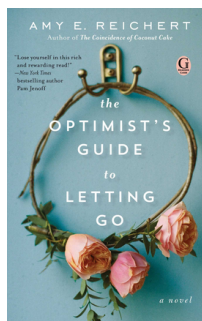

The Problem With Forever
Jennifer L. Armentrout

When Mallory starts at a new school, she isn't expecting to see Rider, her former foster brother. As they rekindle their friendship, memories resurface which they'll have to face together.

All Adults Here
Emma Straub

Astrid has raised three children who now have children of their own; after the death of an acquaintance, Astrid starts to rethink her parenting decisions and reveals a secret she's been hiding for years.

The Optimist's Guide to Letting Go
Amy E. Reichert

Gina is already overwhelmed with raising her teenage daughter, caring for her ailing mother and managing her food truck when she finds evidence that her father might not be her biological father.