

Lucy Steilberg

I was born into the church 87 years ago. When my mother was about eight my grandparents and their two daughters moved to Louisville from central Kentucky. My grandmother, a Presbyterian preacher's daughter, was told by her friends in the Danville Presbyterian Church to get off the train in Crescent Hill and join CHPC and they did. Every important thing that has happened to me has been at the church. I met Alan Steilberg here when I was 14. I was singing in the choir then and I sang in the choir for many years. I have taught both children and adults in Sunday school, and served several terms on session.

Eva Stimson

I have been a member of CHPC since moving to Louisville with other staff of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 1988. Jerry and I visited several Presbyterian churches in Louisville, but we knew as soon as we experienced the vibrant worship and community of CHPC that this was the church for us. We are grateful that our now-adult children, Rachel and Luke, grew up in this community of faith. I have served several terms on session, taught children's Sunday school for many years, and taught in the ELL program. I have also served on the Nurture and Outreach committees, and I'm active on the Gun Violence Prevention Team and coordinate our women's book group. I feel God calling me to do my part to provide strong leadership for CHPC during this time of transition.

I will be returning for a fourth year as a Deacon. I have enjoyed this role, even through CHPC's hard times. My husband, Stew Jr., and I have attended CHPC since 1994 and joined in 1996. CHPC has played a very significant and meaningful role in my life, shaping much of who I am as a person today. I currently work as a speech therapist, serving infants and toddlers through Kentucky's early intervention program.

Dave Bush

A native Californian, I began attending CHPC in 2005, soon after moving to Louisville. Since then, I've been an active member of the congregation serving on several committees and session, co-leading Sunday school classes, and participating in worship. I volunteer at the presbytery as a member of the Commission on Ministry and with the national church by serving on the Presbyterian Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates. In my free time, I enjoy taking walks through Cherokee Park and spending time with Molly. At CHPC, I am grateful for the people I have met and the deep friendships I have made over the years.

Gail DeMarsh

I joined CHPC twenty years ago when I moved to the Crescent Hill neighborhood. This church has always been a place of spiritual support, learning and community for me. I've served as an Elder and a Deacon, on Nurture Council, the Nominating Committee and as a member of several short-term committees. I look forward to being a Deacon again, as an opportunity to help live out our church's value of caring for each other.

Barbara Hedspeth

I became a member in the late 1980s and have sung in the choir for a number of years. I served as a Deacon, and have been active in our Earth Care Team and currently serve on the Worship Committee and the Personnel Committee. I'm committed to supporting our church during this stressful time and helping to rebuild our congregation.

Ben Langley

I'm a Baptist Minister who found a home at Crescent Hill Presbyterian Church soon after graduating from Southern Seminary in 1993. In 1997, Shannon and I were commissioned as mission co-workers to the Dominican Republic where we focused on developing partnerships between U.S. churches and the Dominican Evangelical Church until 2003. Upon our return, I served on session and the PNC, and I currently serve on the nominating committee where I feel called to continue in this capacity as we discern God's call within our beloved community. For 13 years I have worked for JCPS as the Director of Community Support Services. Among my various roles is working with the Build-A-Bed Project, which CHPC supports each year in November.
