Community Supported Agriculture

June

What is Community Supported Agriculture (CSA)?

CSA affords customers an intimate connection with their food, the farmers growing it, and the land where it is grown. People take part in CSA by purchasing a "share" of the upcoming season's harvest. This partnership benefits both the farmer and the shareholder, or what we call a "member". This direct transaction is meant to cover early expenses when there is less income being generated on the farm, enabling the farm to maintain financial stability throughout the season. In return, members enjoy the freshest, most nutrient-dense, seasonal vegetables available.
