February 2, 2017 - Bloomfield Hills, MI – Construction Association of Michigan (CAM) Inducts New Chairman and Three New Members to its Board of Directors

At the 131st Annual Meeting of the Construction Association of Michigan (CAM), held February 1, 2017 at MotorCity Casino Hotel in Detroit, the association's new officers and directors who will serve on the 2017 Board of Directors were installed.

CAM's New Chairman of the Board is John Raimondo, corporate director and international business unit leader for Roncelli, Inc., Sterling Heights. Raimondo also currently serves as Chairman of the CAM's Government Affairs Committee.

Each year three Directors retire from CAM's 12-member Board, and three new Directors are elected by the CAM Membership. The newly elected 2017 Directors are: Stephen Frantz, executive vice president of Motor City Electric Co., Detroit; Samuel Ruegsegger III, project executive for the Christman Company, Detroit; and Paul Stachowiak, president of Integrated Design Solutions, LLC, Troy.

Newly promoted to CAM Vice Chairmen are: Brad Leidal, of Leidal & Hart Mason Contractors, Inc. and Preston Wallace of Limbach Company, LLC. CAM's incoming Treasurer is Joseph Fontanesi of Fontanesi & Kann Co. / Architectural Building Components, Inc.

Other current members of the CAM Board of Directors are: Kerlin Blaise of Blaze Contracting, Inc.; Thomas Broad of Midwest Steel, Inc.; Kevin Foucher of Commercial Contracting Corp.; Jennifer Panning of Artisan Tile, Inc.; and Erik Wordhouse of Edwards Glass Company.

CAM is the oldest and largest regional construction association in the United States. Founded in 1885, CAM is based in Bloomfield Hills, MI. CAM promotes and supports the construction industry through ongoing legislative relations, professional development and public awareness efforts. It provides leadership on key issues such as regulatory reform, economic development, workers' compensation and unemployment compensation, continuing education, labor relations service, and complete safety training programs and consultation. CAM is governed by a 12-member Board of Directors, elected by the membership.
