

Liberties or Liberation: The ATF and Arms Freedom

Logan Anderson

Gun ownership and gun control are the hot debate in modern American society. America's Founders understood the power and importance of having an armed populace. This allows the people not only to defend themselves but also to hold the government accountable and to resist tyranny. However, this constitutional right has come under fire from the ATF. The ATF has consistently demonstrated its inability to effectively uphold the Constitution, and it constantly infringes upon the rights of the people. The Second Amendment is the most important right Americans have as it guarantees the protection of other rights; because of this, it is necessary that it be defended. Since the ATF has demonstrated its inability to fulfill the purpose of government, it must be abolished because of its constitutional overreach, violations of the liberties of the people, and its lack of necessity in today's society. Upholding the Second Amendment is crucial for preserving liberty and justice for all.
