Dear Parents,

I hope you and your families are all well. As we make the transition to fully remote learning, please know that we realize this isn't easy for parents and students. It certainly brings a whole new set of challenges for teachers as well.

Remember that AIS is not mandatory, but is intended to help students. In order to attempt to do this I have tried to arrange times to meet with students remotely through Google Meets on Wednesdays as we have been (with some changes in the time slots) and on either Monday or Friday. Some meets may overlap with other class or specials' meets. The teachers involved are aware of this and will do their best to make sure that students are able to catch up on what was missed.

Additionally there may be some optional practice assignments posted on Google Classroom. If for some reason, students cannot attend the meets, it would be beneficial for them to work on these extra practice assignments.

Students in grade 2-4 will be using the website www.education.com. They will need a login for this site. There was an instruction sheet regarding this website in the 2nd graders' Math AIS envelopes which you received with the other items picked up from the classroom. Third grade parents received an email mid October with this information, but I can send these again if needed. Fourth graders have used this in class, but I'm sure they don't remember the randomly generated logins, so I will email them to the students directly.

Google Meet times for fully remote instruction are as follows:
