The Call for Social Equity

Moderated by Attorney General Kwame Raoul, Illinois

- Cat Packer, Executive Director, Department of Cannabis Regulation, City of Los Angeles
- Cristy DiMaria, Assistant Attorney General, Colorado Department of Law
- Mira Baylson, Partner, Cozen O'Connor
- Hon. Elgie R. Sims Jr., State Senator, Illinois

Social equity considerations are driving cannabis reforms. National research demonstrates that black and brown Americans have borne the brunt of prohibition policies. In response, states and localities have centered equity in their regulatory programs, but challenges remain. This discussion will explore policy proposals and legal issues – at both the state and federal level – concerning the move to increase access to ownership, reduce barriers to entry in the marketplace, and rectify past harms.

8:45am – 9:45am

Consumer Protection and Cannabis: Advertising Restrictions, Restricting Youth Consumption, and Packaging and Labeling

Moderated by Attorney General TJ Donovan, Vermont

- Ross Hoogerhyde, First Assistant Attorney General, Colorado Department of Law
- Mark Neuberger, Of-Counsel, Foley Lardner
- Lewis Koski, Chief Operating Officer, Marijuana Enforcement Tracking Reporting Compliance (METRC)
- Kyle Sherman, CEO, Flowhub

1.916.478.0075 5050 Laguna Blvd., Ste. 112-323
Elk Grove, CA 95758

Attorneys General are the primary enforcer of state consumer protection laws. As more consumers enter the cannabis marketplace and stricter regulatory requirements are imposed on current and future operators, Attorneys General should be attuned to the various methods in which consumer protection laws can be applied to this developing market. This discussion will focus on addressing deceptive advertising claims, restricting marketing and manufacturing practices designed to entice youth consumption, and packaging and labeling requirements.

9:45am – 10:00am

BREAK

10:00am – 11:00am

Hemp & Hemp-Derived Products: Legal Challenges Following the 2018 Farm Bill

Moderated by Attorney General Leslie Rutledge, Arkansas

- Andrew Goff, Assistant Attorney General, Hawaii Attorney General's Office
- Siran Faulders, Partner, Troutman Pepper
- Gary Kaminsky, Senior Regulatory Advisor, American Trade Association for Cannabis and Hemp
- John Hewitt, Senior Director for State Affairs, Consumer Brands Association

The 2018 Farm Bill carved hemp and hemp derived products under 0.3% THC from the definition of marijuana under the Controlled Substances Act. As a result, the national marketplace for hemp and hemp derived products is booming. However, challenges remain in hemp cultivation programs, confusion over hemp derived products regulation and safety standards, and there is a lack of enforcement resources. This discussion will focus on the developments in federal and state law to clarify the hemp regulatory landscape, enforcement practices to reign in bad actors, and best practices in product manufacturing and testing standards.

11:00am – 11:50am

Health Impacts of Cannabis Legalization: Consumption Patterns, Harms and Benefits of Use, and Public Health

Moderated by Attorney General Aaron Ford, Nevada

- Shannon O'Fallon, Senior Assistant Attorney General, Oregon Attorney General's Office
- Elyse Contreras, Senior Epidemiologist, Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment

- Jessica Neuwirth, Public Health and Consumer Protection Policy Analyst, Oregon Liquor Control Commission
- Dr. Rachel Knox, Cannabis Regulators of Color Coalition

Cannabis can be used for therapeutic reasons, but consumption may result in adverse health effects. Understanding the current consumption patterns, the scientific literature on the harms and benefits associated with use, and the role of public health data systems and education campaigns is critical to protecting consumers and patients. This discussion will focus on what we know and do not know from the peer reviewed scientific literature.

11:50am – 12:10pm

Break for Lunch Service

12:10pm – 1:00pm

Working Luncheon: Public Safety Impacts of Cannabis Legalization: Poly Substance Impaired Driving and Illicit Market Activity

Moderated by Harinder Kapur, Senior Deputy Attorney General, California Department of Justice

- Jim Burack, Director, Colorado Department of Revenue - Marijuana Enforcement Division
- Darrin Grondel, Vice President of Traffic Safety, Responsibility.org
- Nicholas P. Lovrich, Regents Professor Emeritus, Washington State University

The impact of state cannabis legalization on public safety is the subject of debate. The data is mixed on how legalization has increased crime rates and impacted law enforcement. Two issues are at the forefront: poly-substance impaired driving and illicit market activity. This discussion will focus on how Attorneys General and other stakeholders can focus on these challenges through collaboration and coordination.

1:00pm – 2:00pm

Fireside Chat & Moderated Panel Discussion: Cooperative Federalism Principles in the National Debate

Attorneys General Phil Weiser, Colorado, and Wayne Stenehjem, North Dakota

Moderated panel led by Attorney General Phil Weiser, Colorado

1.916.478.0075

5050 Laguna Blvd., Ste. 112-323
Elk Grove, CA 95758

- Mark Bolton, Senior Director of Public Policy & Senior Legal Counsel, GW Biosciences
- Kelly Fair, U.S. General Counsel, Canopy Growth
- Jake Hegeman, Senior Vice President, Wine & Spirits Wholesalers of America
- Cat Packer, Executive Director, Department of Cannabis Regulation, City of Los Angeles, and Member, Cannabis Regulators of Color Coalition

A majority of states have now decriminalized medical or adult-use cannabis and the U.S. House and Senate leadership have announced their intent to introduce a national legalization bill in 2021. Many believe the question is not if or when, but how national legalization will address the issue of a federal cannabis regulatory framework. Special attention will need to be paid to the balance between federal and state interests. Attorneys General play a critical voice in articulating federalism concerns to Congress. This working lunch will host a fire-side style chat between two Attorneys General focused on how the national debate might be informed by long-standing principles of cooperative federalism.

TUESDAY JUNE 15TH*CWAG Natural Resources and Environment Meeting – Open to All
Haleakala Ballroom, Grand Wailea

6:00am – 9:00am

Breakfast for All Attendees

7:30am – 8:30am

Environmental Justice

Moderated by Attorney General Leevin Camacho, Guam

- Cholla Khouri, Director, Consumer and Environmental Protection Division, New Mexico Attorney General's Office
- John D.S. Gilmour, Partner & Co-Chair of Environmental Litigation Section, Kelley Drye

Attorneys General are deeply committed to ensuring Americans see the full benefit of environmental protection and have a voice in public health concerns. Environmental justice is a deeply rooted initiative to help us better achieve our core mission to protect the environment through collaboration and meaningful engagement at all levels of government. This panel will discuss Attorney General actions taken to ensure the federal and state laws are applied in a fair and equitable manner to achieve measurable outcomes for all communities.

8:30am – 9:30am

Water Flows to Money – Wall Street vs. Main Street

Moderated by Attorney General Jason Ravnsborg, South Dakota

- Gary Libecap, Professor of Economics, University of California Santa Barbara
- James Eklund, Former Director, Colorado Water Conservation Board
- Kate Ryan, Senior Staff Attorney, Colorado Water Trust

Rivers, lakes and streams are the lifeblood of Western states. States view water as a public good that must be carefully allocated under public supervision and control. The prior appropriation doctrine imposes significant limitations on the transfer and marketing of water to prevent injury to water rights and to protect flows for instream uses. Some investors on the other hand see water as a valuable commodity that should be freely traded. Local communities are concerned that buy and try practice will undermine the local economy. The panel will explore this emerging issue.

9:30am – 9:45am

BREAK1.916.478.0075 5050 Laguna Blvd., Ste. 112-323
Elk Grove, CA 95758

9:45am – 11:00am

The Colorado River: “Adapting to the 21st Century”

Moderated by Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, Oregon

- Bidah Becker, Associate Attorney, Navajo Tribal Utility Authority
- Greg Walch, General Counsel, Southern Nevada Water Authority
- Rebecca Mitchell, Director, Colorado Water Conservation Board
- Tom Buschastzke, Director, Arizona Department of Water Resources

Almost one hundred years ago, the Colorado River Compact brought together the seven Colorado River Basin States (Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming) and the federal government to allocate the most significant water source in the most arid regions of the country. Throughout the 20th Century the federal government built large-scale water storage projects on the Colorado River to harness its water for irrigation, power, flood control, domestic, and municipal use. The Colorado river governance process is designed to allow for Colorado River basin states to utilize their apportionments and fulfill settlement obligations with various Tribes. Yet, a multi-decade drought, and massive population growth in the Colorado River Basin are creating new challenges in providing a sustainable water supply for the Basin States and tribes alike. This panel will discuss how the states, the federal government, tribes, water users, and stakeholders are working cooperatively to meet the water supply demands of the 21st Century.

11:00am – 11:45am

Tribal Liaisons and Inter-Sovereign Cooperation

Led by Attorneys General Hector Balderas, New Mexico and Todd Rokita, Indiana

- Sherry Treppa, Chairperson, Habematolel Pomo of Upper Lake

The United States Congress, through federal laws, has recognized that tribal economic development promotes the twin goals of economic self-sufficiency and political self-determination of American Indian tribes. However, miscommunications regarding policy differences and practices between sovereigns can cause friction and disruptions. Thus, all sovereigns can benefit from open communication. As the state and tribes wish to continue an era of state-tribal cooperation in areas of mutual concern, this panel will focus on fostering important conversations regarding public lands and consumer protection.

11:45am – 12:00pm

- Bill Jackson, Partner & Co-Chair of Environmental Litigation Section, Kelley Drye
- Andrew Cook, Of Counsel, Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP

National security and siting of oil and gas pipelines has garnered a lot of recent attention as the United States ramped up domestic production. Recent litigation and federal policy changes are continuing to reshape the energy and regulatory environment. This panel will review shifting regulatory requirements related to national security, climate change, federal and state permitting under the Clean Water Act, as well as the Supreme Court's recent review of eminent domain authority under the Natural Gas Act. The panel will also discuss the actions taken to address regulation, litigation and anti-contamination efforts regarding per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS).

Public nuisance lawsuits have reemerged again in modern litigation. This theory of litigation has been explored for decades to seek redress for firearm violence, environmental harms, banking practices and the opioid epidemic. Cities, counties and all forms of local government entities are now seeking standing in the courts to pursue claims against a myriad of perceived harms. At least since the MSA Tobacco settlement, state Attorneys General have traditionally been the advocates the general public seeks out for such redress and consumer protection. This panel will explore the present challenges and future of this form of litigation, the use of special counsels by governmental entities and the issues created when political subdivisions do not coordinate legal strategies.

PANEL 2: Lessons Learned and Moving Forward – Opioids 2.0

Moderated by Attorney General Josh Stein, North Carolina

- Dr. William Soliman, PhD., BCMAS, Founder & Chief Executive Officer, Accreditation Council for Medical Affairs (ACMA)

- Jason Sundby, Chairman & Chief Executive Officer, Deterra System & Verde Technologies, Inc.
- Paul Singer, Senior Counsel for Public Protection, Texas Attorney General's Office

As the opioid crisis continues, we must work together to turn the tide and restore the health of our communities. The opioid epidemic will not abate without a coordinated effort from all sectors, including health care providers, government, public health officials, law enforcement, patients, and their loved ones. Through partnerships, we can address the overall health inequities and determinants of health that exist where we live, learn, work, and play. This discussion will highlight actions that Attorneys General, individuals, families, researchers and communities are taking to prevent and treat opioid use disorders and reduce overdose deaths.

United States policy goals have long advanced efficiency and equity concerns. Of late, however, resilience as a policy goal is receiving increased attention. In the cybersecurity arena, for example, we are evaluating our systems and institutions for resiliency—asking whether we are prepared to adapt and cope with cyberharms. Recent events including electric power market shocks in Texas, wildfires (and forest health concerns), cyber-attacks on infrastructure, and water management issues in the wake of droughts, resilience is a concept whose time has come. In this panel, we will address this overall concept and pay particular attention to its application in the cybersecurity context.
