

170 FERC ¶ 61,064
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION

Before Commissioners: Neil Chatterjee, Chairman;
Richard Glick and Bernard L. McNamee.

PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC

Docket No. RP20-41-000

ORDER ON PETITION FOR DECLARATORY ORDER

(Issued January 30, 2020)

1. On October 4, 2019, PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC (PennEast) filed a petition for a declaratory order (Petition) following a decision from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (Third Circuit) in In re PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC.¹ PennEast seeks the Commission's interpretation of the scope of the eminent domain authority in section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act (NGA).² The Commission grants the Petition in part, and denies it in part, as discussed below.

I. Background

2. PennEast is a Delaware limited liability company, managed by UGI Energy Services, LLC, pursuant to a Project Management Agreement.³ On January 19, 2018, in Docket No. CP15-558-000, the Commission issued a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the PennEast Project, an approximately 116-mile greenfield natural gas pipeline designed to provide firm natural gas transportation service from receipt points in the eastern Marcellus Shale region, in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, to delivery points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, terminating at an interconnection with Transcontinental

¹ 938 F.3d 96 (3d Cir. 2019) (PennEast).

² 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h) (2018).

³ PennEast is a joint venture owned by Red Oak Enterprise Holdings, Inc., a subsidiary of AGL Resources Inc. (20 percent interest); NJR Pipeline Company, a subsidiary of New Jersey Resources (20 percent interest); SJI Midstream, LLC, a subsidiary of South Jersey Industries (20 percent interest); UGI PennEast, LLC, a subsidiary of UGI Energy Services, LLC (20 percent interest); and Spectra Energy Partners, LP, a subsidiary of Enbridge Inc. (20 percent interest). Petition at 3-4.

Gas Pipe Line Company, LLC in Mercer County, New Jersey.⁴ The project's total certificated capacity of 1,107,000 dekatherms per day⁵ is approximately 90 percent subscribed pursuant to long-term agreements for firm transportation service and will provide service to markets in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, and surrounding states.⁶ Upon commencement of activities authorized in the Certificate Order, PennEast will become subject to the Commission's jurisdiction as a natural gas company under NGA section 2(6).⁷

3. PennEast states that, following issuance of the certificate, it was unable to reach agreement with the State of New Jersey to acquire easements for the portions of its proposed pipeline route that would cross land in which New Jersey holds a property interest.⁸ Consequently, PennEast instituted condemnation proceedings in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey (District Court) in order to obtain these and other necessary easements.⁹ The State of New Jersey and its agencies (collectively, "State" or "New Jersey") claimed property interests in forty-two parcels of land that PennEast sought access to via condemnation: two parcels in which New Jersey

⁴ PennEast Pipeline Co., LLC, 162 FERC ¶ 61,053, at P 1 (Certificate Order), order on reh'g, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 (2018) (Certificate Rehearing Order), petitions for review pending sub nom. Del. Riverkeeper Network v. FERC, D.C. Cir. Nos. 18-1128, et al. (first petition filed May 9, 2018) (argument held in abeyance October 1, 2019, "pending final disposition of any post-dispositional proceedings in the Third Circuit or proceedings before the United States Supreme Court resulting from the Third Circuit's decision").

⁵ Id. A dekatherm is approximately equal to 1000 cubic feet of natural gas. To put this number in perspective, the Energy Information Administration records that New Jersey consumed 44,410 million cubic feet of natural gas in January 2019, its peak demand month last winter. See <https://www.eia.gov/opendata/qb.php?sdid=NG.N3010NJ2.M>. On average, that would be 1,432,580 dekatherms per day. Thus, the PennEast project here could serve 77 percent of New Jersey's last peak winter demand.

⁶ Certificate Order, 162 FERC ¶ 61,053 at PP 4, 6. The twelve shippers that have subscribed capacity on the PennEast Project will use the gas for a variety of purposes, including but not limited to, local distribution service for end-use consumers and electric generation; the additional capacity will also support supply diversity and reliability. Id. PP 4, 28.

⁷ 15 U.S.C. § 717a(6).

⁸ Petition at 5-6.

⁹ Id. at 6.

holds fee simple ownership interests, and forty parcels in which New Jersey claims non-possessory property interests, including conservation easements and restrictive covenants mandating under state law a particular land use.¹⁰

4. New Jersey moved to dismiss the condemnation actions for lack of jurisdiction, asserting that the Eleventh Amendment grants New Jersey sovereign immunity from suit by private parties such as PennEast in federal court.¹¹ The District Court granted PennEast's application for orders of condemnation, and rejected New Jersey's sovereign immunity argument.¹² Responding to New Jersey's assertion that "their arguments would [have been] different if the United States government were pursuing eminent domain rights[,]" the District Court found that PennEast "has been vested with the federal government's eminent domain powers and stands in the shoes of the sovereign."¹³ The District Court further reasoned that "the NGA expressly allows" certificate holders to utilize eminent domain in District Court, and as "PennEast holds a valid certificate . . . issued by the FERC[,"] New Jersey's Eleventh Amendment arguments failed.¹⁴

5. New Jersey then appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which held that the NGA does not abrogate New Jersey's sovereign immunity and vacated the District Court's order.¹⁵ The Third Circuit found that while the NGA delegates eminent domain authority to certificate holders, the text of "the NGA does not constitute a delegation to private parties of the federal government's exemption from Eleventh Amendment immunity."¹⁶ In the court's view, "there are powerful reasons to doubt the delegability of the federal government's exemption from Eleventh Amendment

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ Id. The Eleventh Amendment states: "The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State." U.S. CONST. amend. XI.

¹² In re PennEast Pipeline Co., LLC, No. 18-1585, 2018 WL 6584893, at *12, 25 (D.N.J. Dec. 14, 2018).

¹³ Id. at *12.

¹⁴ Id.

¹⁵ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 99, 111-13 (3d Cir. 2019) (In re PennEast), reh'g en banc denied (Nov. 5, 2019).

¹⁶ Id. at 112-13; accord id. at 99-100; see id. at 111-12.

immunity,”¹⁷ particularly when that delegation occurs through a statute enacted pursuant to the Commerce Clause.¹⁸ However, the court consciously avoided that constitutional question¹⁹ by holding that the text of the NGA failed to provide an “unmistakably clear” delegation of the federal government’s exemption from Eleventh Amendment immunity.²⁰ Ultimately, the Third Circuit declined to “assume that Congress intended – by its silence – to upend a fundamental aspect of our constitutional design.”²¹

6. On October 4, 2019, PennEast petitioned the Commission to issue a declaratory order providing the Commission’s interpretation of three questions under NGA section 7(h). Specifically, PennEast requests a declaratory order that addresses the following:

- 1) Whether a certificate holder’s right to condemn land pursuant to NGA section 7(h) applies to property in which a state holds an interest;
- 2) Whether NGA section 7(h) delegates the federal government’s eminent domain authority solely to certificate holders; and ¹⁷ Id. at 105; accord id. at 111; see id. at 100; id. at 107-11 (reviewing precedent).

¹⁸ Id. at 105, 108 & nn.13, 15 (citing Seminole Tribe of Fla. v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44, 59, 72-73 (1996) (Seminole Tribe of Fla.)); see also id. at 108 & n.13 (explaining that Seminole Tribe abrogated Pennsylvania v. Union Gas Co., 491 U.S. 1 (1989) (Union Gas Co.)).

¹⁹ See id. at 111 (quoting Doe v. Pa. Bd. of Prob. & Parole, 513 F.3d 95, 102 (3d Cir. 2008) (“As a first inquiry, we must avoid deciding a constitutional question if the case may be disposed of on some other basis.”)); id. at 111-12 (quoting Guerrero-Sanchez v. Warden York Cty. Prison, 905 F.3d 208, 223 (3d Cir. 2018) (describing the “cardinal principle of statutory interpretation that when an Act of Congress raises a serious doubt as to its constitutionality, courts will first ascertain whether a construction of the statute is fairly possible by which the question may be avoided”) (citation and alterations omitted)).

²⁰ Id. at 107 (quoting Dellmuth v. Muth, 491 U.S. 223, 228 (1989) (quoting Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234, 242 (1985))); see id. at 107-08 & n.12 (discussing Dellmuth and Atascadero).

²¹ Id. at 112.

3) Whether NGA section 7(h) delegates to certificate holders the federal government's exemption from claims of state sovereign immunity.²²

II. Public Notice, Interventions, Protests and Comments

7. Notice of the Petition was published in the Federal Register on October 10, 2019.²³ The notice established October 18, 2019, as the deadline for filing comments and interventions.²⁴ Timely, unopposed motions to intervene were filed by the entities listed in Appendix A. These motions to intervene are granted automatically by operation of Rule 214 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure.²⁵ During the comment period, the New Jersey Conservation Foundation and Niskanen Center (collectively, Niskanen), Maya K. van Rossum and the Delaware Riverkeeper Network (collectively, Riverkeeper),²⁶ the Township of Hopewell, U.S. Senator Cory A. Booker, the Environmental Defense Fund, the New Jersey Division of Rate Counsel, and the State of New Jersey²⁷ filed protests of the Petition, and numerous commenters, including landowners, filed comments in opposition to the Petition. After the comment deadline, U.S. Representatives from New Jersey filed a letter in opposition to the Petition.²⁸ Several protestors assert that it is inappropriate for the Commission to grant the instant Petition when the Third Circuit has already spoken on the matter and argue that submitting a brief as amicus curiae would be a more proper avenue for the Commission to express its opinion.²⁹ Protestors also agree with the Third Circuit's decision that the ²² See Petition at 2.

²³ 84 Fed. Reg. 54,600.

²⁴ Id.

²⁵ 18 C.F.R. § 385.214(c)(1) (2019).

²⁶ The protests are substantially identical; hereinafter, we cite only the Delaware Riverkeeper Network protest.

²⁷ The State of New Jersey includes the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, the New Jersey Board of Public Utilities, and the Delaware and Raritan Canal Commission.

²⁸ Letter from, Tom Malinowski and Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representatives (Oct. 29, 2019).

²⁹ See New Jersey Protest at 14; New Jersey Division of Rate Counsel (Rate Counsel) Protest at 5; Riverkeeper Protest at 2, 5; see also Niskanen First Protest at 5-6,

NGA does not provide delegated authority for a pipeline to condemn lands in which a state has a property interest.³⁰

8. Numerous parties, including natural gas transporters, local distribution companies, and associations within the natural gas industry, commented in support of the Petition. Several parties state that the text and legislative history of NGA section 7(h) demonstrates that Congress specifically intended to delegate federal eminent domain authority to certificate holders against all owners of property needed for a project with whom a certificate holder cannot reach agreement, including states, and that this eminent domain authority has been an essential part of a comprehensive regulatory scheme since the statute was amended to include that authority in 1947.³¹ Commenters note that certificates of public convenience and necessity may only be obtained through a quasi-judicial adjudicatory process administered by Commissioners appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate and that this adjudicatory process is replete with robust opportunities for public participation.³² Commenters further contend that the Commission grants certificate holders only a limited authority to condemn specific rights of way with little ability to alter the route without further Commission approval, a process heavily regulated by federal oversight and enforcement.³³ Finally, commenters assert the Third Circuit's decision will have significant adverse consequences on end-use consumers, local distribution companies, and the natural gas industry as a whole.³⁴ Commenters support the Petition because they agree that a decision of this magnitude

8-9 (omitting suggestion that the Commission file an amicus brief); Senator Cory A. Booker Protest at 1 (same).

³⁰ See New Jersey Protest at 2-3, 6-7, 14; Riverkeeper Protest at 9-10; Township of Hopewell, Mercer County, New Jersey Protest at 1; Township of Kingwood Motion to Intervene at 1; Township of Holland Comments at 1.

³¹ See Interstate Natural Gas Association of America (INGAA) Comments at 4-6; Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Company, LLC Comments at 4; TC Energy Corporation Comments at 15-18; American Gas Association (AGA) Comments at 11; American Public Gas Association (APGA) Comments at 3-6.

³² INGAA Comments at 6-9; TC Energy Corp. Comments at 5, 12-14.

³³ INGAA Comments at 8-9; TC Energy Corp. Comments at 14-16.

³⁴ See New Jersey Natural Gas Company Comments at 3-6; INGAA Comments at 10-13; TC Energy Corp. Comments at 18-20; AGA Comments at 9-13.

should not be made without input from the regulatory agency charged with administration of the statute.³⁵

9. On October 11, 2019, the New Jersey Conservation Foundation and Niskanen Center jointly filed a motion to extend the deadline for comments until November 1, 2019. The Commission’s Secretary denied the motion for extension of time by notice issued on October 16, 2019. Niskanen criticized the length of the comment period.³⁶ However, “[t]he Commission, like other agencies, is generally master of its own calendar and procedures.”³⁷ The Commission’s discretion to issue declaratory orders includes the discretion to expedite requests and deny extensions as “time, the nature of the proceeding, and the public interest” dictate.³⁸ We reject Niskanen’s argument that the ³⁵ See AGA Comments at 7-9, 12; TC Energy Corp. Comments at 2, 5-7; APGA Comments at 5-7.

³⁶ Niskanen Request for Extension at 2-3; Niskanen First Protest at 3-4; Niskanen Second Protest at 1-2.

³⁷ Stowers Oil and Gas Co., 27 FERC ¶ 61,001, at 61,001 (1984); see id. at 61,002 n.3 (collecting precedent); see, e.g., Vt. Yankee Nuclear Power Corp. v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 435 U.S. 519, 524 (1978) (“[T]his Court has for more than four decades emphasized that the formulation of procedures was basically to be left within the discretion of the agencies to which Congress had confided the responsibility for substantive judgments.”); Fed. Power Comm’n v. Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Corp., 423 U.S. 326, 333 (1976) (“[A] reviewing court may not . . . dictat[e] to the agency the methods, procedures, and time dimension of the needed inquiry”); Richmond Power & Light v. FERC, 574 F.2d 610, 624 (D.C. Cir. 1978) (“Agencies have wide leeway in controlling their calendars”) (citing City of San Antonio v. CAB, 374 F.2d 326, 329 (D.C. Cir. 1967)); Superior Oil Co. v. FERC, 563 F.2d 191, 201 (5th Cir. 1977) (deferring to an agency’s choice of procedures and allocation of resources because “[t]he Commission should ‘realistically tailor the proceedings to fit the issues before it’”) (quoting Mobil Oil Corp. v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 483 F.2d 1238, 1252 (D.C. Cir. 1973) (quotation marks omitted)); Bell Tel. Co. v. FCC, 503 F.2d 1250, 1266 (3d Cir. 1974) (“[T]he ultimate choice of procedure . . . is left to the discretion of the agency involved, and will be reversed only for an abuse of discretion.”); see also Public Administrative Law and Procedure, 73A C.J.S. Public Administrative Law & Procedure § 543 (2019) (“The ultimate choice of procedure by an agency in making its orders is not ordinarily subject to judicial revision.”).

³⁸ 5 U.S.C. § 554(c)(1) (2018). Niskanen’s contrary argument rests on a case involving a rulemaking proceeding under 5 U.S.C. § 553 (2018). See Niskanen Second Protest at 4 (citing Ober v. EPA, 84 F.3d 304, 314 (9th Cir. 1996)). That reliance was misplaced. Compare 5 U.S.C. § 553(b)-(c) (rulemaking), with id. § 554 (adjudications).

initial comment period was too short in these circumstances. The length of the initial comment period was driven by PennEast’s request for expedited action in light of then-applicable deadlines for appellate litigation in the Third Circuit; furthermore, the comment period was also plainly sufficient to allow interested parties—including Niskanen—to submit robust comments, all of which have been thoroughly considered by the Commission in the development of this order. Further, we considered late comments as they were not so late as to delay the proceeding or prejudice any party.

10. On October 28, 2019, PennEast filed a motion for leave to answer and answer to the protests and comments. Although the Commission’s Rules of Practice and Procedure do not permit answers to protests,³⁹ our rules also provide that we may waive this provision for good cause.⁴⁰ On October 30, 2019, Niskanen filed a protest to PennEast’s October 28, 2019 answer, urging the Commission to deny PennEast’s motion to answer.⁴¹ However, we will accept PennEast’s Answer here because it has provided information that has assisted us in our decisionmaking.⁴²

III. Discussion

A. The Commission’s Authority to Act on the Petition

11. We start with our jurisdiction to act on this petition: protesters claim we have none; we disagree.

12. New Jersey contends⁴³ that issuing an order in this case would contradict our prior statement in the underlying proceedings that “[i]ssues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline under the eminent domain provisions of section 7(h) of the NGA are matters for the applicable state or federal court.”⁴⁴ However, New Jersey omits ³⁹ 18 C.F.R. § 385.213(a)(2) (2019).

⁴⁰ See 18 C.F.R. § 385.101(e).

⁴¹ See Niskanen Second Protest at 4.

⁴² Niskanen objects to PennEast filing an answer after the initial comment deadline, but this is not unusual. See, e.g., Gulf Crossing Pipeline Co. LLC, 169 FERC ¶ 61,169, at P 10 (2019); Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Co., LLC, 169 FERC ¶ 61,051, at P 11 (2019).

⁴³ New Jersey Protest at 15-18.

⁴⁴ E.g., id. at 5, 16, 20 (quoting Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33); accord id. at 17, 19 (eliding portions of same).

the context of that statement in the Certificate Rehearing Order. That order rejected New Jersey’s request that we limit the land on which PennEast may exercise eminent domain because “[t]he Commission does not have the authority to limit a pipeline company’s use of eminent domain once the company has received its certificate of public convenience and necessity.”⁴⁵ Courts have consistently affirmed that position.⁴⁶

13. Contrary to New Jersey’s overbroad reading of the word “related,” the Certificate Rehearing Order did not disclaim Commission jurisdiction over all “issues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline,” because every certificate order must necessarily consider and decide such issues in connection with approving the route in the first place. Importantly, the issue before the Commission here relates to an interpretation of NGA section 7(h), which the Commission has been given authority to apply and interpret. As the Commission has more fully explained in other certificate orders, the issues appropriately addressed in judicial eminent domain proceedings are those related to “the timing of acquisition or just compensation.”⁴⁷ Nothing in this order contradicts any of our findings in the orders that are currently pending review in the D.C. Circuit.

⁴⁵ Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33 (emphasis added).

⁴⁶ See, e.g., Twp. of Bordentown, N.J. v. FERC, 903 F.3d 234, 265 (3d Cir. 2018) (stating that the NGA section 7(h) “contains no condition precedent” to right of eminent domain other than issuance of the certificate when a certificate holder is unable to acquire a right-of-way by contract); Berkley v. Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 896 F.3d 624, 628 (4th Cir. 2018) (“Issuing such a Certificate conveys and automatically transfers the power of eminent domain to the Certificate holder. . . . Thus FERC does not have discretion to withhold eminent domain once it grants a Certificate.” (citation omitted)); Midcoast Interstate Transmission, Inc. v. FERC, 198 F.3d 960, 973 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (“Once a certificate has been granted, the statute allows the certificate holder to obtain needed private property by eminent domain. . . . The Commission does not have the discretion to deny a certificate holder the power of eminent domain.” (citation omitted)).

⁴⁷ E.g., Atl. Coast Pipeline, LLC, 164 FERC ¶ 61,100, at P 88 (2018) (“Nonetheless, the Commission does not oversee the acquisition of necessary property rights. Issues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline under the eminent domain provisions of NGA section 7(h), including issues regarding the timing of acquisition and just compensation are matters for the applicable state or federal court.” (emphasis added)); Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197, at P 76 (2018) (same). Some orders have followed the formula used in the Certificate Rehearing Order and have not specified the relevant eminent domain issues. See, e.g., Nexus Gas Transmission, LLC, 162 FERC ¶ 61,011, at P 6 (2018); Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Co., LLC, 161 FERC ¶ 61,250, at P 35 (2017), cited in Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33 n.82. Other orders have specified the applicable issue. Compare

14. Some parties oppose the issuance of a declaratory order on separation of powers grounds.⁴⁸ Riverkeeper emphasizes that it is the role of the judiciary, not the Commission, to decide sovereign immunity issues and to interpret the law.⁴⁹ Senator Booker similarly states that it is the role of Congress and the courts, not the Commission, to consider constitutional issues, and that Congress is the appropriate body to resolve any pipeline siting obstacles or implications stemming from the Third Circuit’s decision.⁵⁰ Senator Booker argues that the Commission should not weigh in on sovereign immunity because Congress did not provide the Commission with that authority.⁵¹ The Watershed Institute⁵² submits that the Petition serves as “an improper attempt to circumvent” the Third Circuit.⁵³ New Jersey and Riverkeeper state that a declaratory order would not assist any court and not be entitled deference.⁵⁴ Niskanen and New Jersey claim that the Commission has previously stated that it does not have jurisdiction or expertise to resolve constitutional challenges pertaining to the NGA

Millennium Pipeline Co., L.L.C., 158 FERC ¶ 61,086, at P 6 (2017) (“Issues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline under the eminent domain provisions of section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act, including issues regarding compensation, are matters for the applicable state or federal court.” (emphasis added)), Nw. Pipeline, LLC, 156 FERC ¶ 61,086, at P 12 (2016) (same), and Fla. Se. Connection, LLC, 154 FERC ¶ 61,264, at P 10 (2016) (same); with Rover Pipeline LLC, 158 FERC ¶ 61,109, at P 68 (2017) (“Issues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline under the eminent domain provisions of section 7(h) of the NGA, including issues regarding the timing of acquisition, are matters for the applicable state or federal court.” (emphasis added)).

⁴⁸ See, e.g., Senator Cory A. Booker’s Protest at 1; Niskanen First Protest at 5; Riverkeeper Protest at 2-4.

⁴⁹ Riverkeeper Protest at 3-4.

⁵⁰ Senator Cory A. Booker Protest at 1-2; see also Letter from Tom Malinowski and Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representatives (Oct. 29, 2019).

⁵¹ Id.

⁵² Stony Brook Millstone Watershed Association refers to itself as Watershed Institute.

⁵³ Watershed Institute Motion to Intervene at 2.

⁵⁴ Riverkeeper Protest at 2, 4; New Jersey Protest at 22.

eminent domain provision.⁵⁵ Similarly, Riverkeeper and the Environmental Defense Fund argue that interpretation of the Eleventh Amendment does not fall within the ambit of the Commission’s expertise.⁵⁶ New Jersey also contends that the Commission deserves no deference “when its interpretation runs headlong into the canon of constitutional avoidance.”⁵⁷ However, consistent with the Mountain Valley and Atlantic Coast certificate orders New Jersey cited⁵⁸ and as discussed below, we decline to address the constitutional issues raised in the Petition.

15. We emphasize that this declaratory order sets forth the Commission’s interpretation of the NGA, and thereby does not implicate any separation of powers concerns. It is well within our authority to interpret the NGA and our own regulations, particularly when we issue our interpretation in the form of a declaratory order.⁵⁹ Moreover, our interpretation of NGA section 7(h) merits deference.⁶⁰ The Third Circuit’s ruling does not diminish the Commission’s authority to speak on a statute that we administer.⁶¹ Because the Third Circuit did not “hold[] that its construction follows

⁵⁵ New Jersey Protest at 20 (citing Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 161 FERC ¶ 61,043, at P 63 (2017) (“[O]nly the courts can determine whether Congress’[s] action in passing section 7(h) of the NGA conflicts with the Constitution.”); Atl. Coast Pipeline, LLC, 161 FERC ¶ 61,042, at P 81 (2017) (same)); Niskanen First Protest at 9.

⁵⁶ Environmental Defense Fund Protest at 3; Riverkeeper Protest at 9.

⁵⁷ New Jersey Protest at 22.

⁵⁸ See supra note 55.

⁵⁹ See Obtaining Guidance on Regulatory Requirements, 123 FERC ¶ 61,157, at P 19 (2008) (“The declaratory order process can be very useful to persons seeking reliable, definitive guidance from the Commission. . . . As with other formal Commission actions, a declaratory order represents a binding statement of policy that provides direction to the public and our staff regarding the statutes we administer and the implementation and enforcement of our orders, rules and regulations. A declaratory order is therefore the most reliable form of guidance available from the Commission.”) (discussion of supporting precedent omitted).

⁶⁰ See Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 843 (1984) (holding that “if the statute is silent or ambiguous with respect to the specific issue, the question for the court is whether the agency’s answer is based on a permissible construction of the statute”).

⁶¹ The gravamen of the Third Circuit’s decision is that NGA section 7(h) is either silent or lacks the requisite specificity to support a delegation of the federal government’s exemption from assertions of state sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment.

from the unambiguous terms of the statute,” its construction of the NGA does not foreclose a subsequent or different Commission interpretation of that statute.⁶² Nor does that court’s construction bind other courts of appeals.⁶³

16. New Jersey, Division of Rate Counsel (Rate Counsel), Niskanen, and Senator Booker assert that it would violate Commission regulations for the Commission to order declaratory relief.⁶⁴ Again, we disagree. As those parties note, the relevant regulation specifies that a person must file a petition when seeking “[a] declaratory order or rule to terminate a controversy or remove uncertainty.”⁶⁵ The Commission’s regulation does not define what sort of uncertainty may be appropriate to justify a petition for declaratory relief, and the New Jersey parties offer no precedent on this score either. In our view, as we will describe more fully below, the Third Circuit’s opinion creates sufficient uncertainty as to the proper role of the Commission in condemnation proceedings such that it is appropriate for us to address these issues in this order.⁶⁶ That the New Jersey

See PennEast, 938 F.3d at 112 (“[W]e will not assume that Congress intended—by its silence—to upend a fundamental aspect of our constitutional design.”); see id. (“[N]othing in the text of the statute even ‘remotely impl[ies] delegation[.]’”) (quoting Blatchford v. Native Vill. of Noatak, 501 U.S. 775, 786 (1991)); id. at 111 (“[N]othing in the NGA indicates that Congress intended to do so.”); id. at 100 (“[N]othing in the text of the NGA suggests that Congress intended to do so.”).

⁶² Nat'l Cable & Telecomms. Ass'n v. Brand X Internet Servs., 545 U.S. 967, 982 (2005) (Brand X) (finding that an appellate court’s prior interpretation of an ambiguous statutory provision did not preclude a federal agency from adopting a contrary reasonable interpretation in subsequent proceedings); cf. also United States v. Mendoza, 464 U.S. 154, 158 (1984) (Mendoza) (finding the doctrine of nonmutual offensive collateral estoppel inapplicable against non-private litigants).

⁶³ See, e.g., Tatis v. Allied Interstate, LLC, 882 F.3d 422, 429 (3d Cir. 2018); Schnitzer v. Harvey, 389 F.3d 200, 203 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (citing Kreuzer v. Am. Acad. of Periodontology, 735 F.2d 1479, 1490 n.17 (D.C. Cir. 1984)); Humphreys v. DEA, 105 F.3d 112, 117 (3d Cir. 1996); Indep. Petroleum Ass'n of Am. v. Babbitt, 92 F.3d 1248, 1257-58 (D.C. Cir. 1996).

⁶⁴ Senator Cory A. Booker Protest at 1; New Jersey Protest at 2; Rate Counsel Protest at 4; Niskanen First Protest at 7-9.

⁶⁵ 18 C.F.R. § 385.207(a)(2) (2019).

⁶⁶ See 5 U.S.C. § 554(e) (“The agency, with like effect as in the case of other orders, and in its sound discretion, may issue a declaratory order to terminate a controversy or remove uncertainty.”); 18 C.F.R. § 385.207(a)(2) (providing for a party to petition for “[a] declaratory order or rule to terminate a controversy or remove parties agree with the Third Circuit and perceive no uncertainty, of course, does not prevent the Commission from considering petitions submitted under its regulations.

17. Niskanen and New Jersey argue that a declaratory order in this instance would be unprecedented and that “PennEast can point to no Commission Declaratory Orders that wade into already-adjudicated constitutional waters.”⁶⁷ Riverkeeper states that the Commission has previously declined to issue a declaratory order that would result in a “generic finding,” and that a declaratory order granting a petition should be based on specific facts and circumstances.⁶⁸ Contrary to protesters’ assertions, the Commission remains consistent in its use of declaratory orders to provide authoritative guidance to regulated entities on important questions of interpretation regarding statutes, regulations, tariffs, or precedent.⁶⁹ Though it is uncommon, the Commission has acted on petitions for declaratory order filed in response to adverse judicial determinations.⁷⁰ In our view, uncertainty”). In any event, the Commission’s regulations also provide for a party to petition for “[a]ny other action which is in the discretion of the Commission and for which this chapter prescribes no other form of pleading.” 18 C.F.R. § 385.207(a)(5).

⁶⁷ Niskanen First Protest at 8; see New Jersey Protest at 19-20.

⁶⁸ Riverkeeper Protest at 6 (citing ITC Grid Dev., LLC, 154 FERC ¶ 61,206, at P 45 (2016)). The Commission’s finding that a declaratory order was not appropriate to deal with the specific requests in ITC’s petition is limited to that particular case. See ITC Grid Dev., LLC, 154 FERC ¶ 61,206 at P 48. We note that the cited order also states that the Commission’s determinations in its declaratory orders are “generally legal in nature” and may “cover a broad range of issues, including jurisdictional issues and the applicability to specific parties of specific rights and duties arising under the statutes that the Commission administers.” Id. P 42 (emphasis added) (citations omitted). Nothing in our regulations prevents the issuance of a declaratory order to address the rights and duties of certificate holders under the NGA.

⁶⁹ See, e.g., Placer Cty. Water Agency, 167 FERC ¶ 61,056, at PP 15, 17-18, order denying reh’g, 169 FERC ¶ 61,046 (2019) (clarifying the application of a D.C. Circuit decision regarding waiver of section 401 water quality certification under the Clean Water Act to related cases); Nat. Gas Pipeline Co. of Am., 56 FERC ¶ 61,250, at 61,939-40 (1991) (clarifying the extension of jurisdiction to account for state court monetary judgments under its interpretation of D.C. Circuit precedent).

⁷⁰ See Williams Nat. Gas Co. v. City of Okla. City, 890 F.2d 255, 263 (10th Cir. 1989) (Williams Nat. Gas Co.) (upholding FERC’s denial of a rehearing request that “completely disapproved of the conflicting state opinion”) (citing Williams Nat. Gas Co., 47 FERC ¶ 61,308, at 62,103 n.5 (1989)); S. Union Co. v. FERC, 857 F.2d 812, 817-18 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (vacating the Commission’s denial of a petition for a declaratory order on the merits in response to adverse state court judgments, because the Commission

this order is warranted because it will remove uncertainty about the Commission's interpretation of the NGA.

18. New Jersey and Rate Counsel argue that the Commission should have intervened in the Third Circuit appeal or sought leave to file an amicus curiae brief, instead of issuing a declaratory order.⁷¹ Homeowners Against Land Taking – PennEast, Inc. (HALT) and the State of New Jersey contend that the Commission has no authority to re-interpret judicial decisions, and that the Commission can file an amicus brief with either the Third Circuit or the United States Supreme Court, if PennEast petitions for a writ of certiorari.⁷² New Jersey and Niskanen similarly assert that the Commission has implicitly conceded jurisdiction by consistently declining to participate, either by filing an intervention or filing as amicus curiae, in other cases where this issue was raised.⁷³

19. Despite protesters' contention that the Commission has somehow waived the ability to speak on these issues by not intervening in other proceedings, the Third Circuit never sought the Commission's opinion in this matter. Moreover, it would be impractical for the Commission to intervene in every federal court proceeding involving an interstate pipeline company, particularly those where the validity of a Commission-issued certificate is not in question.⁷⁴ We also disagree that the optimal way for the erroneously determined the matter was not controlled by relevant precedent); NextEra Energy, Inc., 166 FERC ¶ 61,049, at PP 23, 27 (2019) (acknowledging contrary court authority in the issuance of a declaratory order); Constitution Pipeline Co., LLC, 162 FERC ¶ 61,014 at P 5 (acting on a petition for a declaratory order filed after a circuit court found that it lacked jurisdiction), order on reh'g, 164 FERC ¶ 61,029 (2018); PJM Interconnection, L.L.C., 139 FERC ¶ 61,183, at PP 3, 27 (2012) (declaring, contrary to a state court order denying summary judgement in a tort action, that negligence claims are limited against Regional Transmission Organizations).

⁷¹ New Jersey Protest at 14; Rate Counsel Protest at 8-9.

⁷² HALT Motion to Intervene at 1; New Jersey Protest at 14, 21.

⁷³ Niskanen First Protest at 9-10; New Jersey Protest at 2.

⁷⁴ With a few exceptions, the Commission has traditionally refrained from exercising its independent litigation authority to intervene in appellate proceedings in the absence of an invitation to do so. For example, the Commission previously accepted the Third Circuit's invitation to participate as an amicus in PPL Energyplus, LLC v. Solomon, 766 F.3d 241 (3d Cir. 2014), but did not participate in the Fourth Circuit's parallel consideration of a closely-related preemption question in PPL EnergyPlus, LLC v. Nazarian, 753 F.3d 467 (4th Cir. 2014), aff'd sub nom. Hughes v. Talen Energy Mktg., LLC, 136 S. Ct. 1288 (2016) (Hughes). Similarly, the Commission participated as an amicus by invitation in Electric Power Supply Ass'n v. Star, 904 F.3d 518, 522 (7th Cir.),

Commission to express its interpretation of the statutes and regulations it superintends is through ad hoc litigation pleadings filed by Commission staff rather than through an order issued by the Commission itself. Protesters themselves concede that “agency ‘litigating positions’ raised for the first time on judicial review” are entitled to no deference.⁷⁵ As PennEast acknowledges, the Commission “has not had frequent occasion” to speak to many of the issues present in the Petition,⁷⁶ namely, the operation of section 7(h) and Congress’s intent in amending the NGA to include it. Therefore, any brief filed by Commission staff as amicus curiae would not have benefitted from the Commission’s articulation of a formal interpretation of NGA section 7(h) and the critical role that provision has in the Commission’s successful administration of the NGA’s “comprehensive scheme of federal regulation of all wholesales of natural gas in interstate commerce.”⁷⁷

20. We disagree with protesters’ argument that issue preclusion and claim preclusion doctrines barred PennEast from seeking a declaratory order, or bar us from acting on the Petition.⁷⁸ Courts have long understood that preclusion principles are applied differently in administrative proceedings.⁷⁹ Administrative agencies like the Commission are “not in reh’g denied (Oct. 9, 2018), cert. denied, 139 S.Ct. 1547 (2019), but did not participate in the consideration of a closely-related preemption question in Coalition for Competitive Electricity v. Zibelman, 906 F.3d 41 (2d Cir. 2018), cert. denied sub nom. Elec. Power Supply Ass’n v. Rhodes, 139 S.Ct. 1547 (2019).

⁷⁵ Riverkeeper Protest at 4 (citing Vill. of Barrington, Ill. v. Surface Transp. Bd., 636 F.3d 650, 660 (2011)).

⁷⁶ Petition at 24.

⁷⁷ Schneidewind v. ANR Pipeline Co., 485 U.S. 293, 300 (1988) (Schneidewind) (quoting N. Nat. Gas Co. v. State Corp. Comm’n of Kan., 372 U.S. 84, 91 (1963) (N. Nat. Gas Co.) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also 15 U.S.C. § 717(b)).

⁷⁸ See New Jersey Protest at 9-14; Rate Counsel Protest at 5-8.

⁷⁹ Second Taxing Dist. of City of Norwalk v. FERC, 683 F.2d 477, 484 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (finding that collateral estoppel “does not apply when a judgment of policy is reconsidered by an agency in quasi-legislative proceedings”). Other courts have explained that preclusion principles are limited in administrative agency proceedings when, unlike here, the agency is acting in a judicial capacity and reviewing previously “resolved disputed issue of fact properly before it.” United States v. Utah Const. & Mining Co., 384 U.S. 394, 422 (1966); cf. also Astoria Fed. Sav. and Loan Ass’n v. Solimino, 501 U.S. 104, 108 (1991) (“Courts do not, of course, have free rein to impose rules of preclusion, as a matter of policy, when the interpretation of a statute is at hand.”); Tagg Bros. & Moorhead v. United States, 280 U.S. 420, 445 (1930) (“A rate order is not a position identical to that of a private litigant.”⁸⁰ Protesters’ assertions that the Commission is precluded from acting on the petition lack merit.⁸¹ In light of the Commission’s statutory responsibilities under the NGA, and the possibility that other circuits not bound by the Third Circuit’s opinion may face similar questions, the Commission is not barred from declaring its interpretation of a statute it implements.⁸² Indeed, the Supreme Court has recognized that a contrary rule—in which a single court of appeals can bind subsequent agency interpretations of a statute that Congress has delegated to the agency—would “lead to the ossification of large portions of our statutory law.”⁸³ Furthermore, the Supreme Court has implicitly approved this practice by res judicata.”); Duvall v. Atty. Gen., 436 F.3d 382, 387-88 (3d Cir. 2006) (finding collateral estoppel applicable to a factual dispute so long as “application of the doctrine does not frustrate congressional intent or impede the effective functioning of the agency”). Even if we were in a quasi-judicial proceeding instead of a quasi-legislative proceeding, as here, typical preclusion principles would not apply because the question presented is a pure question of statutory interpretation. See, e.g., United States v. Moser, 266 U.S. 236, 242 (1924) (“[Res judicata] does not apply to unmixed questions of law.”).

⁸⁰ Mendoza, 464 U.S. at 159 (quoting INS v. Hibi, 414 U.S. 5, 8 (1973)).

⁸¹ Cf. Montana v. United States, 440 U.S. 147, 157 (1979) (finding estoppel where, unlike here, the government was a party to the proceeding and the “‘question expressly and definitely presented in this suit is the same as that definitely and actually litigated and adjudged’ adversely to the Government in state court”) (citation omitted); United States v. Utah Constr. and Mining Co., 384 U.S. at 422 (holding that res judicata applies to the parties “[w]hen an administrative agency is acting in a judicial capacity.”).

⁸² See, e.g., Mendoza, 464 U.S. at 160 (“A rule allowing nonmutual collateral estoppel against the government in such cases would substantially thwart the development of important questions of law by freezing the first final decision rendered on a particular legal issue.”); Harris v. Martin, 834 F.2d 361, 365 (3d Cir. 1987) (following Mendoza); see also Samuel Estreicher, Nonacquiescence by Federal Administrative Agencies, 98 Yale L.J. 679, 683, 719 (1989) (explaining that “in pursuing a policy of intercircuit nonacquiescence, by definition the agency is not acting inconsistently with the case law of the court of appeals that will review its action” and concluding that there is no “per se constitutional bar against nonacquiescence”).

⁸³ Brand X, 545 U.S. at 982-83 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted) (“Only a judicial precedent holding that the statute unambiguously forecloses the agency’s interpretation, and therefore contains no gap for the agency to fill, displaces a conflicting agency construction.”).

routinely granting certiorari for the purpose of vacating and remanding prior appellate court decisions in light of subsequent agency action.⁸⁴

21. In acting on a straightforward question of law—the Commission’s interpretation of NGA section 7(h)—we are not proceeding in the traditional civil-litigation setting in which the doctrines of issue and claim preclusion typically apply.⁸⁵ As such, the dual purposes of preclusion doctrines, i.e. “protecting litigants from the burden of relitigating an identical issue with the same party or his privy and of promoting judicial economy by preventing needless litigation,” would not be served by restraining the Commission from acting through this declaratory order.⁸⁶ Preclusion is particularly unwarranted here because we make no attempt to address the Eleventh Amendment question left unanswered by the Third Circuit:⁸⁷ whether the NGA’s delegation of the federal government’s exemption from state sovereign immunity was a valid, constitutional exercise of federal power.⁸⁸ Our more limited focus here is whether the text of the statute itself, along with its legislative history, suggests any limit on the exercise of eminent domain under NGA section 7(h) based on the owner of the property at issue. As clarified in PennEast’s Answer, the Petition does not request that the Commission interpret the ⁸⁴ See, e.g., Coventry Health Care of Mo., Inc. v. Nevils, 135 S.Ct. 2886 (2015) (remanding for further consideration in light of new regulations promulgated by an agency); Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Kobold, 135 S.Ct. 2886 (2015) (same); see also Mouelle v. Gonzales, 548 U.S. 901 (2006) (remanding for further consideration in light of interim rule promulgated by an agency); Long Island Care at Home, Ltd. v. Coke, 546 U.S. 1147 (2006) (remanding in light of informal guidance); Slekis v. Thomas, 525 U.S. 1098 (1999) (same).

⁸⁵ See supra note 79 and accompanying text.

⁸⁶ Parklane Hosiery Co., Inc. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 326 (1979) (citation omitted); see also Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Pa. Pub. Util. Comm'n, 288 F.3d 519, 525 (3d Cir. 2002) (noting issue preclusion doctrine’s “twin goals of fairness and efficient use of private and public litigation resources”).

⁸⁷ See, e.g., Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Pa. Pub. Util. Comm'n, 342 F.3d 242, 252 (3d Cir. 2003) (describing the elements for collateral estoppel, including that the issue sought to be precluded is the same as that involved in the prior action).

⁸⁸ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 112-13 (holding that “the NGA does not constitute a delegation to private parties of the federal government’s exemption from Eleventh Amendment immunity”).

Eleventh Amendment, but rather states that its request concerns the scope of NGA section 7(h).⁸⁹

22. Moreover, New Jersey cannot use claim or issue preclusion doctrines to bind the Commission to a judgment in an adjudication in which the Commission was not a party.⁹⁰ Nor can New Jersey argue that the Commission is precluded by attempting to apply the “first-filed” rule to this proceeding.⁹¹ The “first-filed” rule only arises when “two cases between the same parties . . . are commenced in two different Federal courts.”⁹² Moreover, the Commission is not bound by the Third Circuit’s passing reference to a possible “work-around” that would allow some federal official (perhaps the Commission) to bring a condemnation action in a pipeline’s stead—this reference was not “essential to the judgment,” so issue preclusion does not apply.⁹³ Furthermore, PennEast’s Answer points out that “[a] substantially identical petition could have been (and still could be) filed by any . . . other companies with a stake in these issues.”⁹⁴ Denying the Petition on a strained preclusion theory would likely result in a subsequent duplicative agency proceeding, pointlessly elevating form over substance.⁹⁵ For this reason, we conclude that granting the Petition is appropriate.

⁸⁹ PennEast Answer at 6.

⁹⁰ See, e.g., Blonder-Tongue Labs., Inc. v. Univ. of Ill. Found., 402 U.S. 313, 329 (1971) (holding that “[litigants] who never appeared in a prior action—may not be collaterally estopped without litigating the issue”); United States v. 5 Unlabeled Boxes, 572 F.3d 169, 173 (3d Cir. 2009) (noting that res judicata requires a showing that the prior suit involved “the same parties or their privies,” while collateral estoppel requires a showing that “the party being precluded from relitigating the issue was fully represented in the prior action”) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

⁹¹ New Jersey Protest at 11.

⁹² Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth. v. Ragonese, 617 F.2d 828, 830 (D.C. Cir. 1980); see Cont'l Grain Co. v. Barge FBL-585, 364 U.S. 19, 26 (1960).

⁹³ See Jean Alexander Cosmetics, Inc. v. L’Oreal USA, Inc., 458 F.3d 244, 249 (3d Cir. 2006) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 27 (1982)).

⁹⁴ PennEast Answer at 20.

⁹⁵ Here, for example, another certificate holder that has intervened in this proceeding is currently encountering similar obstacles in exercising eminent domain against the State of Maryland. See infra P 64.

23. Before we move to the merits of the Petition, we must clarify the extent of our authority. Numerous parties express concern about the Commission “attempt[ing] to overrule the Third Circuit.”⁹⁶ It should go without saying that we can do no such thing. Nor are we attempting to “subvert the judicial process,” as Niskanen suggests.⁹⁷ As a “creature of statute,”⁹⁸ the Commission—like any administrative agency—has no power to act “unless and until Congress confers power upon it.”⁹⁹ We have no authority to “overrule” a precedential opinion of a United States Court of Appeals. PennEast refutes the notion that its Petition requests that the Commission overrule the Third Circuit; rather, PennEast states that its Petition serves to “allow the Commission to provide its considered interpretation of [s]ection 7(h) of the NGA, without negating the role of the Third Circuit.”¹⁰⁰ Furthermore, this order does not incentivize forum shopping, as Environmental Defense Fund claimed,¹⁰¹ because it does not provide an avenue by which losing parties can circumvent appellate courts: this order neither compels the Third Circuit to reverse its decision, nor compels New Jersey to consent to suit, nor compels any landowner to transfer its property. This order does nothing more than set out the Commission’s interpretation of a statute it administers.

⁹⁶ Riverkeeper Protest at 7; see New Jersey Protest at 3 (“FERC should not break procedures and misread the law to indulge PennEast’s efforts to overrule that correct holding.”); Rate Counsel Protest at 1 (“That decision [by the Third Circuit] is authoritative and binding as to PennEast, and the Commission cannot overrule it by declaration.”); Niskanen First Protest at 6 (“[I]t is not within the Commission’s power to upend a federal court’s constitutional holding by issuing a declaratory order that purports to overrule that decision.”); Letter from Tom Malinowski and Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representatives (Oct. 29, 2019) (agreeing with Rate Counsel that the Third Circuit’s decision cannot be overruled by the Commission).

⁹⁷ Niskanen First Protest at 4.

⁹⁸ Tesoro Alaska Co. v. FERC, 778 F.3d 1034, 1038 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (citing Atl. City Elec. Co. v. FERC, 295 F.3d 1, 8 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (Atl. City Elec.)).

⁹⁹ La. Pub. Serv. Comm’n v. FCC, 476 U.S. 355, 374 (1986).

¹⁰⁰ PennEast Answer at 32.

¹⁰¹ Environmental Defense Fund Protest at 3.

B. PennEast's Request for a Declaratory Order

24. In the Petition, PennEast requests the Commission's interpretation of NGA section 7(h).¹⁰² As discussed below, we grant the Petition in part and deny it in part.

25. First, PennEast requests the Commission address whether a certificate holder's right to condemn land pursuant to NGA section 7(h) applies to property in which a state holds an interest.¹⁰³ We grant this request and find that NGA section 7(h) does not limit a certificate holder's right to exercise eminent domain authority over state-owned land.¹⁰⁴ The text of NGA section 7 is expansive and NGA section 7(h) contains no limiting language concerning state land;¹⁰⁵ the legislative history of NGA section 7(h) describes a specific intent to prevent states from conditioning or blocking the use of eminent domain by certificate holders;¹⁰⁶ and caselaw—including both federal precedent shortly after the statute's enactment¹⁰⁷ and the Commission's earliest hearing orders¹⁰⁸—supports this view. Additionally, Congress's decision to amend an analogous statute to expressly carve out state lands, but not to similarly amend NGA section 7(h), indicates its understanding that the eminent domain authority exercised by certificate holders under NGA section 7 does, in fact, apply to state lands.¹⁰⁹

¹⁰² Petition at 2.

¹⁰³ See id.

¹⁰⁴ See infra PP 28-48.

¹⁰⁵ See 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h).

¹⁰⁶ See S. Rep. No. 80-429, at 1-4 (1947).

¹⁰⁷ Thatcher v. Tenn. Gas Transmission Co., 180 F.2d 644 (5th Cir. 1950) (Thatcher).

¹⁰⁸ Tenneco Atl. Pipeline Co., 1 FERC ¶ 63,025, at 65,203-04 (1977) (Tenneco Atlantic) (“[T]he eminent domain grant to persons holding Section 7 certificates applies equally to private and state lands.”); Recommendation to the President Alaska Nat. Gas Transp. Sys., 58 F.P.C. 810, 1454 (1977) (same).

¹⁰⁹ See infra note 170 (quoting Energy Policy Act of 1992, Pub. L. 102-486, 106 Stat. 2776 (1992); H.R. Rep. No. 102-474, at 99 (1992)).

26. Second, PennEast requests the Commission clarify to whom the federal government's eminent domain authority has been granted.¹¹⁰ We grant this request and find that NGA section 7(h) delegates eminent domain authority solely to certificate holders and not to the Commission.¹¹¹ It is "beyond dispute" that the federal government has the constitutional power to acquire property by exercise of eminent domain.¹¹² The federal government can also delegate the power to exercise eminent domain to a private party, such as the recipient of a certificate of public convenience and necessity, when needed to fulfill the certificate.¹¹³ Critically, the Commission itself was never granted the authority to exercise eminent domain. Although we are responsible for the public convenience and necessity determination that then, by operation of law under a separate statutory provision, automatically confers federal eminent domain authority over a specified route to certificate holders,¹¹⁴ we do not subsequently grant, exercise, or oversee the exercise of that eminent domain authority.¹¹⁵

27. Finally, PennEast requests the Commission address whether NGA section 7(h) necessarily delegates the federal government's exemption from state sovereign immunity.¹¹⁶ We agree that is how the statute reads and was intended to operate, but we deny PennEast's petition to the extent that it would require the Commission to evaluate the constitutional sufficiency of NGA section 7(h) for purposes of abrogating state sovereign immunity or delegating federal authority under the Eleventh Amendment.¹¹⁷ Although the Commission typically refrains from opining on the constitutionality of the ¹¹⁰ See Petition at 2.

¹¹¹ See infra PP 49-53.

¹¹² Tenneco Atlantic, 1 FERC at 65,203 (citing United States v. Carmack, 329 U.S. 230 (1946) (Carmack)); Oklahoma v. Guy F. Atkinson Co., 313 U.S. 508 (1941).

¹¹³ Tenneco Atlantic, 1 FERC at 65,203-04 & n.53 (citing Thatcher, 180 F.2d 644); see also E. Tenn. Nat. Gas Co., 102 FERC ¶ 61,225, at P 68 (2003) (East Tennessee); Islander E. Pipeline Co., 102 FERC ¶ 61,054, at PP 128, 131 (2003) (Islander East).

¹¹⁴ 15 U.S.C. § 717f(c).

¹¹⁵ Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33 (citing Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Co., 161 FERC ¶ 61,250 at P 35); Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197, at P 76 (2018).

¹¹⁶ See Petition at 2.

¹¹⁷ See infra PP 54-55.

statutes it superintends,¹¹⁸ we find it appropriate to address the necessity of broad eminent domain powers for the successful administration of the NGA’s “comprehensive scheme of federal regulation of all wholesales of natural gas in interstate commerce.”¹¹⁹ To that end, we discuss the potential implications of the Third Circuit’s decision on the natural gas industry.¹²⁰

1. NGA Section 7(h) Delegates the Authority to Certificate Holders to Condemn State Property

28. PennEast asserts that Congress possesses the authority both to condemn state property and to delegate that authority to private companies.¹²¹ PennEast states that federal eminent domain authority has been accepted for well over a century and “does not depend on having the consent of the state in which the property is located.”¹²² To require a state’s consent to the condemnation of its property pursuant to Congressional authority, effectively allowing a state to “block the federal government’s use of eminent domain in furtherance of Congress’s other constitutional authorities,” would allow a state to render a “constitutional grant of authority . . . nugatory.”¹²³

29. This interpretation of the federal eminent domain scheme is consistent with longstanding Commission precedent holding that “it is beyond dispute” the federal government can acquire property through eminent domain and may delegate this ¹¹⁸ Finnerty v. Cowen, 508 F.2d 979, 982 (2d Cir. 1974) (explaining that administrative agencies “have neither the power nor the competence to pass on the constitutionality of administrative or legislative action,” except when “called upon to determine facts or to apply its expertise”) (quoting Murray v. Vaughn, 300 F.Supp. 688, 695 (D.R.I. 1969)); see, e.g., Gibas v. Saginaw Mining Co., 748 F.2d 1112, 1117 (6th Cir. 1984) (“[A]dministrative bodies like the Board do not have the authority to adjudicate the validity of legislation which they are charged with administering.”); Spiegel, Inc. v. FTC, 540 F.2d 287, 294 (7th Cir. 1976) (finding that the federal agency erred by making a constitutional determination); Downen v. Warner, 481 F.2d 642, 643 (9th Cir. 1973) (“Resolving a claim founded solely upon a constitutional right is singularly suited to a judicial forum and clearly inappropriate to an administrative board.”).

¹¹⁹ Schneidewind, 485 U.S. at 300; see supra note 77.

¹²⁰ See infra PP 56-65.

¹²¹ Petition at 16-18.

¹²² Id. at 16 (citing Kohl v. United States, 91 U.S. 367, 372 (1875) (Kohl)).

¹²³ Id. (citing Kohl, 91 U.S. at 371).

authority to a certificate holder “when needed to fulfill the certificate.”¹²⁴ The Third Circuit’s opinion does not dispute this scheme.

30. Central to this grant of authority, PennEast asserts, is Congress’s intent to “authorize certificate holders to condemn any necessary lands, including state-owned lands.”¹²⁵ PennEast further suggests that as NGA section 7(h) contains no language limiting the type of property a certificate holder may acquire through the exercise of eminent domain, Congress intended to delegate to certificate holders the right to condemn state-owned land.¹²⁶ Riverkeeper argues that if Congress intended to prevent state sovereign immunity in terms of interstate natural gas pipelines, it could have done so when drafting the NGA.¹²⁷ Further, Riverkeeper contends that Congress did not delegate the federal government’s eminent domain power to certificate holders.¹²⁸

31. The Commission’s principal obligation under the NGA is to “encourage the orderly development of plentiful supplies of . . . natural gas at reasonable prices.”¹²⁹ Specifically, the NGA provides the Commission with jurisdiction over the “transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce . . . [and] the sale in interstate commerce of natural gas for resale.”¹³⁰ In NGA section 7(c), Congress gave the Commission jurisdiction to determine whether the construction and operation of proposed pipeline facilities are in the public convenience and necessity.¹³¹ Once the Commission has made that determination, NGA section 7(h) provides the certificate holder with eminent domain authority to acquire the land necessary to construct the approved facilities, in the event the certificate

¹²⁴ Infra notes 146 and 147 (quoting precedent).

¹²⁵ Petition at 19.

¹²⁶ Id. at 20.

¹²⁷ Riverkeeper Protest at 10.

¹²⁸ Id. at 12.

¹²⁹ NAACP v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 425 U.S. 662, 669-70 (1976); accord Myersville Citizens for a Rural Cnty., Inc. v. FERC, 783 F.3d 1301, 1307 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (citing NAACP v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 425 U.S. at 669-70); see, e.g., Certification of New Interstate Nat. Gas Pipeline Facilities, 88 FERC ¶ 61,227, at 61,743, 61,751 (1999) (Certificate Policy Statement), clarified on other grounds, 90 FERC ¶ 61,128, further clarified on other grounds, 92 FERC ¶ 61,094 (2000).

¹³⁰ 15 U.S.C. § 717(b) (2018).

¹³¹ Id. § 717f(c).

holder cannot acquire the land by other means.¹³² Section 7(h) further states that when the value of the property to be condemned is greater than $3,000, the condemnation proceeding may be heard in United States district court.¹³³

32. Based on the text of NGA section 7(h), and as confirmed by the legislative history, we believe it is evident that Congress, in delegating to certificate holders its power of eminent domain, provided broad eminent domain authority in order to achieve the objectives of the NGA without interference from states and to preserve the Commission's exclusive jurisdiction over the transportation and sale of natural gas for resale in interstate commerce.

a. Statutory Text and Precedent

33. The "starting point for interpreting a statute is the language of the statute itself."¹³⁴ NGA section 7(h) provides, in its entirety, that:

When any holder of a certificate of public convenience and necessity cannot acquire by contract, or is unable to agree with the owner of property to the compensation to be paid for, the necessary right-of-way to construct, operate, and maintain a pipe line or pipe lines for the transportation of natural gas, and the necessary land or other property, in addition to right-of-way, for the location of compressor stations, pressure apparatus, or other stations or equipment necessary to the proper operation of such pipe line or pipe lines, it may acquire the same by the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the district court of the United States for the district in which such property may be located, or in the State courts. The practice and procedure in any action or proceeding for that purpose in the district court of the United States shall conform as nearly as may be with the practice and procedure in similar action or proceeding in the courts of the State where the property is situated: Provided, That the United States district courts shall only have jurisdiction of cases when the amount claimed by the owner of the property to be condemned exceeds $3,000.¹³⁵

¹³² Id. § 717f(h).

¹³³ Id.

¹³⁴ Gwaltney of Smithfield, Ltd. v. Chesapeake Bay Found., Inc., 484 U.S. 49, 56 (1987).

¹³⁵ 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h).

34. Immediately apparent in the text of NGA section 7(h) is that it is the “holder of the certificate” that is granted the power of eminent domain. NGA section 7 establishes a multi-step process for pipeline companies seeking to acquire land via eminent domain.¹³⁶ NGA section 7(c) requires that the pipeline company first receive its certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Commission pursuant to its authority under NGA section 7(e). The pipeline company then must attempt to obtain land identified in the certificate as necessary for the project through purchase or contract.¹³⁷ If the certificate holder is still unable to obtain this land, NGA section 7(h) permits it to acquire the land necessary for the project by the exercise of eminent domain.¹³⁸ Critically, as PennEast notes, NGA section 7(h) contains no language limiting that exercise of eminent domain “based on the status of the property’s owner.”¹³⁹ And the Commission has previously rejected arguments to limit the exercise of eminent domain over state-owned property, relying on the broad and unqualified reference to “the necessary land or other property” in section 7(h).¹⁴⁰

35. Judicial review of NGA section 7(h) shortly following its enactment supports this view. Thatcher,¹⁴¹ decided in 1950, squarely confronted the constitutionality of the delegation of eminent domain authority to pipelines under NGA section 7(h), which was enacted three years earlier. Thatcher did not address the Eleventh Amendment, but resolved several other constitutional objections, including claims that NGA section 7(h) invaded authority reserved to the States under the Tenth Amendment.¹⁴² As relevant here, Thatcher held:

Consideration of the facts, and the legislative history, plan and scope of the Natural Gas Act, and the judicial consideration and application the Act has received, leaves us in no doubt that the grant by Congress of the power of

¹³⁶ Id.

¹³⁷ Id.

¹³⁸ Id.

¹³⁹ Petition at 20.

¹⁴⁰ Islander East, 102 FERC ¶ 61,054 at P 131 (“[I]n NGA section 7(h), Congress gave the natural gas company authorization to acquire the necessary land or property to construct the approved facilities by the exercise of eminent domain”); East Tennessee, 102 FERC ¶ 61,225 at P 68 (same).

¹⁴¹ 180 F.2d at 646-47.

¹⁴² See id. at 645.

eminent domain to a natural gas company, within the terms of the Act, and which in all of its operations is subject to the conditions and restrictions of the statute, is clearly within the constitutional power of Congress to regulate interstate Commerce. Indeed when Congress determined it in the public interest to regulate the interstate transportation and interstate sale of natural gas as provided by the Act of 1938 and the amendment of 1942, so that companies engaged in such business not only could not operate except under the authority provided by the statute, but could also be required to provide additions and extension of service, it was proper to make provision whereby the full statutory scheme of control and regulation could be made effective, by the grant to such company of the right of eminent domain. The possession of this right could well be considered necessary to insure ability to comply with the Commission requirements as well as with all phases of the statutory scheme of regulation.

There is no novelty in the proposition that Congress in furtherance of its power to regulate commerce may delegate the power of eminent domain to a corporation, which though a private one, is yet, because of the nature and utility of the business functions it discharges, a public utility, and consequently subject to regulation by the Sovereign.¹⁴³

This reasoning in Thatcher was followed in contemporaneous decisions of state courts¹⁴⁴ and federal courts¹⁴⁵ regarding the constitutionality of pipeline eminent domain authority.

¹⁴³ Id. at 647 (listing Supreme Court precedent).

¹⁴⁴ See Parkes v. Nat. Gas Pipe Line Co., 249 P.2d 462, 467 (Okla. 1952) (“The power of the United States to authorize the exercise of eminent domain within the limits of the several states is not limited to the taking of property by the government itself for its own proper uses, but includes the right to delegate the power of eminent domain to corporations . . .”).

¹⁴⁵ See Williams v. Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Corp., 89 F. Supp. 485, 487 (W.D.S.C. 1950) (“Earlier decisions of the Supreme Court uphold the authority of Congress to grant eminent domain powers to private corporations in furtherance of interstate commerce.”); id. at 489 (“[W]hen the Legislature provides for the taking of private property for a public use it may either prescribe specifically the property that may be taken, or delegate that determination to the agency, either public or private, which is charged with developing the public use.”).

36. And this Commission has uniformly held this view from its inception¹⁴⁶ through today.¹⁴⁷ One of the Commission’s earliest hearing orders, Tenneco Atlantic Pipeline Co., merits restatement because it squarely addressed the question presented here: “may the Congressional grant of eminent domain powers be exercised by a person holding a Commission certificate of public convenience and necessity to acquire a right-of-way through state lands?”¹⁴⁸ Tenneco Atlantic answered that question in the affirmative, finding that “the eminent domain grant to persons holding Section 7 certificates applies equally to private and state lands” for the following reasons:¹⁴⁹

It is beyond dispute that the federal government has the constitutional power to acquire state property by exercise of eminent domain. In addition, the federal government can delegate to a private party, such as the recipient of a Section 7 certificate, the power to exercise eminent domain when needed to fulfill the certificate. At issue here is whether such a delegatee has lesser powers of eminent domain than does the delegator, the federal government.

On its face, there is nothing in Section 7(h) that compels a reading of the language “owner of property” to exclude a state. On the contrary, although “owner of property” is not defined in Section 2 of the Natural Gas Act, it is reasonable to include a state within the plain meaning of that term, since states can own land. Looking behind the statutory language, there is no legislative history that warrants any other reading. The language of Section 7(h) indicates a Congressional grant of plenary eminent domain power to certificate holders, such a grant satisfying the dictum in [United States v. Carmack, [] 329 U.S. [230,] at 243, n.13 [(1946)].

¹⁴⁶ See Tenneco Atlantic, 1 FERC at 65,203-04 (“It is beyond dispute that the federal government has the constitutional power to acquire state property by exercise of eminent domain. In addition, the federal government can delegate to a private party, such as the recipient of a Section 7 certificate, the power to exercise eminent domain when needed to fulfill the certificate.”) (internal citations omitted).

¹⁴⁷ See, e.g., Atl. Coast Pipeline, LLC, 164 FERC ¶ 61,100 at P 87 (“It is beyond dispute that the federal government has the constitutional power to acquire property by exercise of eminent domain. The federal government can also delegate the power to exercise eminent domain to a private party, such as the recipient of an NGA section 7 certificate, when needed to fulfill the certificate[.]”) (internal citations omitted); Mountain Valley, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197 at P 75 (same).

¹⁴⁸ Tenneco Atlantic, 1 FERC at 65,203.

¹⁴⁹ Id.

While there are no judicial pronouncements resolving this question explicitly with respect to Section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act, consideration of the analogue and predecessor of this provision under the Federal Power Act is instructive. Section 21 of the Federal Power Act is the model for Section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act. The corresponding language relevant to this inquiry is identical, and accordingly it is proper to look to judicial decisions interpreting Section 21 to aid in the statutory construction of Section 7(h). When this is done, it is clear that Congress intended to grant recipients of Section 7 certificates the full powers of eminent domain. Specifically, hydroelectric project licensees under Part I of the Federal Power Act have eminent domain power under Section 21 to condemn state land.

Thus, Rhode Island's assertion that a private party possessing eminent domain power conferred by a certificate pursuant to Section 7(h) cannot prevail against a state's ownership interest must be rejected.¹⁵⁰

¹⁵⁰ Id. at 65,203-04 (footnotes citing supporting authority omitted). The passage from Tenneco Atlantic replicated here was itself borrowed nearly verbatim from the Federal Power Commission's formal Recommendation to the President regarding the administration of Alaska Natural Gas Transportation System, supra note 108. The passage from Carmack addressed in Tenneco Atlantic and in Recommendation to the President describes the distinction between statutes that "authorize officials to exercise the sovereign's power of eminent domain on behalf of the sovereign itself" and "statutes which grant to others, such as public utilities, a right to exercise the power of eminent domain on behalf of themselves." Carmack, 329 U.S. at 243 n.13 (emphasis added). The Supreme Court explained that statutes in that second category—in which NGA section 7(h) appears to fall—"are, in their very nature, grants of limited powers. They do not include sovereign powers greater than those expressed or necessarily implied, especially against others exercising equal or greater public powers. In such cases the absence of an express grant of superiority over conflicting public uses reflects an absence of such superiority." Id. (emphasis added). Thus, when the decision in Tenneco Atlantic states that it "satisf[ied] the dictum in Carmack," 1 FERC at 65,204, it meant the delegation to certificate holders to condemn state land was either "necessarily implied," or reflected "an express grant of superiority," or both. We think both elements were satisfied because the authority to condemn state land is necessary to effectuate the express purposes of Congress in granting the Commission exclusive authority to regulate the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce under 15 U.S.C. § 717(b), including the authority to issue certificates of public convenience and necessity under 15 U.S.C. § 717f.

37. We continue to think that Tenneco Atlantic was correctly decided as a matter of statutory interpretation. As elucidated throughout this order, this view is supported by the text and legislative history of the amendment, contemporaneous precedent, and analysis of an analogous provision under the FPA. However, whether the text, context, and legislative history of NGA section 7(h) are sufficient to meet constitutional requirements for purposes of the Eleventh Amendment is a question that is beyond the scope of this order.¹⁵¹

38. More recently, in 2003, the Commission addressed Eleventh Amendment claims to certificate proceedings in Islander East,¹⁵² which found the Eleventh Amendment did not apply to NGA section 7(h) eminent domain proceedings because condemnation actions do not constitute “any suit in law or equity” under the Eleventh Amendment.¹⁵³ The Third Circuit criticized the Commission’s holding in Islander East as insufficiently supported,¹⁵⁴ and we agree that decision was terse. That does not, however, obviate the validity of that final holding. PennEast argues that Islander East was correctly decided, citing Supreme Court authority for the proposition that the Eleventh Amendment does not bar certain types of in rem suits against property in which a state has an interest.¹⁵⁵ The Third Circuit found those cases “are confined – by their terms – to the specialized areas

¹⁵¹ See supra P 27; infra P 55.

¹⁵² 102 FERC ¶ 61,054 at P 123 (“The NGA does not address ‘any suit in law or equity’ against a state. Therefore, the application of the Eleventh Amendment and the Court’s ruling in Seminole Tribe has no significance here.”). The Commission emphasized the preemptive sweep of the NGA as a “comprehensive scheme of federal regulation,” id. (quoting Schneidewind, 485 U.S. at 300-01), and denied Connecticut’s Tenth Amendment arguments for the same reason. See id. P 131. A month later, in East Tennessee, the Commission similarly denied a claim that the Tenth Amendment bars a certificate holder from acquiring state-owned land under NGA section 7(h). 102 FERC ¶ 61,225 at P 68.

¹⁵³ Islander East, 102 FERC ¶ 61,054 at P 123.

¹⁵⁴ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 111 n.19.

¹⁵⁵ See Petition at 37-44 (citing Tenn. Student Assistance Corp. v. Hood, 541 U.S. 440, 443 (2004) (“[C]onclud[ing] that a proceeding initiated by a debtor to determine the dischargeability of a student loan debt is not a suit against the State for purposes of the Eleventh Amendment[.]”); California v. Deep Sea Research, Inc., 523 U.S. 491, 494-95 (1998) (“We conclude that the Eleventh Amendment does not bar jurisdiction of a federal court over an in rem admiralty action where the res is not within the State’s possession.”)).

of bankruptcy and admiralty law”¹⁵⁶ and contrasted authority holding “that sovereigns can assert their immunity in in rem proceedings in which they own property.”¹⁵⁷ In the Third Circuit’s view, such specialized precedent was unable to overcome “the general rule” that “[a] federal court cannot summon a State before it in a private action seeking to divest the State of a property interest.”¹⁵⁸

39. The question whether an eminent domain proceeding to effectuate a Commission certificate under NGA section 7(h) is properly characterized as a “suit in law or equity” or an in rem action for purposes of the Eleventh Amendment is outside the heartland of our quotidian ambit. It involves esoteric matters of constitutional law better suited for review by the Supreme Court on certiorari from the Third Circuit. We decline to umpire that particular dispute unless we must and—unlike the contested certificate proceeding in Islander East—we are not obliged to address that distinction again in response to this discretionary petition for declaratory order.¹⁵⁹ Our prior decision in Islander East, like our decisions in East Tennessee and Tenneco Atlantic, was grounded in the view that it would defeat the core purposes of the NGA if states were able to nullify a Commission certificate of public convenience and necessity that affects state land by simply refusing to participate in an eminent domain proceeding brought to effectuate that federal certificate.¹⁶⁰ We continue to adhere to that position now—and, as we next explain, that position is entirely consistent with the legislative history of NGA section 7(h) and with ¹⁵⁶ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 110.

¹⁵⁷ Id. (citing Minnesota v. United States, 305 U.S. 382, 386-87 (1939); Fla. Dep’t of State v. Treasure Salvors, Inc., 458 U.S. 670, 699 (1982) (plurality)); id. at 110-11 n.17 (citing Aqua Log, Inc. v. Georgia, 594 F.3d 1330, 1334 (11th Cir. 2010)).

¹⁵⁸ Id. at 110 (quoting Idaho v. Coeur d’Alene Tribe of Idaho, 521 U.S. 261, 289, (1997) (O’Connor, J., concurring)); see id. at 111 n.18 (examining Coeur d’Alene).

¹⁵⁹ See 5 U.S.C. § 554(e); 18 C.F.R. § 385.207(a)(2); see, e.g., Pioneer Wind Park I, LLC, 145 FERC ¶ 61,215, at P 35 (2013) (“Section 554(e) of the Administrative Procedure Act and section 207(a)(2) of the Commission’s Rules of Practice and Procedure provide us the authority and discretion to rule on a petition for declaratory order”).

¹⁶⁰ See supra notes 150, 152, and accompanying text. We note that neither Coeur d’Alene nor any of the other cases the Third Circuit addressed in connection with the in rem issue, including the cases cited by PennEast, appears to involve a condemnation action to enforce compliance with a federal agency order. The authorities construing FPA section 21, by contrast, are more directly on point. See infra PP 45-47.

Supreme Court precedent construing the original text of FPA section 21, which is materially identical to NGA section 7(h).

b. Legislative History

40. The language of NGA section 7(h) is expansive. This is consistent with the legislative history which indicates that the absence of limiting language regarding state land was not an oversight; rather, in amending the NGA to include section 7(h), Congress purposely delegated its eminent domain authority to certificate holders to prevent states from nullifying the effect of Commission certificate orders. The Senate Report for NGA section 7(h) is reproduced, in relevant part, below.

This bill follows substantially the wording of the eminent domain provision of the Federal Power Act (U.S.C.A., title 16, sec. 814) which confers upon concerns that have acquired licenses from the Federal Power Commission to operate certain power projects, the right to condemn the necessary property for the location and operation of the projects. When the Congress passed the Natural Gas Act, it failed to include a similar provision of eminent domain to those concerns which qualified as natural gas companies under the act and obtained certificates of public convenience and necessity for the acquisition, construction, or operation of natural gas pipe lines.

....

Thus, an interstate natural gas pipe line which is constructed across several States for the purpose of distributing natural gas in a particular area authorized by the Federal Power Commission and which does not distribute natural gas in each of the States crossed, would not have the right of eminent domain under the constitutions and statutes of such States authorizing the taking of property for a public use. The operation of the pipe line would not be for the benefit of the public in those States crossed by the pipe line but in which there is no distribution of natural gas by such line. But it is necessary to cross those States in carrying out the certificate granted by the Federal Power Commission.

....

Therefore, the Congress of the United States in carrying out its constitutional authority to regulate interstate commerce, should correct this deficiency and omission in the Natural Gas Act by the passage of Senate bill 1028 which confers the right of eminent domain upon those natural gas companies which have qualified under the Natural Gas Act to carry out and perform the terms of any certificate of public convenience and necessity acquired from the Federal Power Commission under the act.

....

It has also been suggested that the granting of the right of eminent domain is a matter peculiarly within the legislative and constitutional purview of the States and that it is proper that such rights should rest with the States in order that the States may therefore be in a position to require a natural-gas pipe-line company entering the State to serve the people of that State as a condition to obtaining the right of eminent domain. This argument defeats the very objectives of the Natural Gas Act. Under the Natural Gas Act, the Federal Power Commission is given exclusive jurisdiction to regulate the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce, the sale in interstate commerce of natural gas for resale for ultimate public consumption for domestic, commercial, industrial, or any other use, and natural-gas companies engaged in such transportation or sale. The Commission, through its certificate power, is authorized to grant certificates of convenience and necessity for the construction of interstate natural-gas pipe lines from points of supply to certain defined and limited markets. If a State may require such interstate natural-gas pipe lines to serve markets within that State as a condition to exercising the right of eminent domain, then it is obvious that the orders of the Federal Power Commission may be nullified.¹⁶¹

41. As indicated above, the Senate Report squarely acknowledged objections to the adoption of NGA section 7(h) on the ground “that the granting of the right of eminent domain is a matter peculiarly within the legislative and constitutional purview of the States.”¹⁶² Nevertheless, the Senate Report concluded that it would “defeat[] the very objectives of the Natural Gas Act,”¹⁶³ including the Commission’s “exclusive jurisdiction to regulate the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce,”¹⁶⁴ if states were permitted to “nullif[y]”¹⁶⁵ the Commission’s certificate orders by conditioning or withholding a pipeline’s exercise of the right of eminent domain over land located in such states. In light of the purpose given for enacting NGA section 7(h), it is reasonable to interpret the absence of limitation in that provision as authorization for a certificate holder to condemn state land when necessary “to carry out and perform the terms of any ¹⁶¹ S. Rep. No. 80-429, at 1-4.

¹⁶² Id. at 3.

¹⁶³ Id.

¹⁶⁴ Id.

¹⁶⁵ Id. at 4.

certificate of public convenience and necessity acquired from the [] Commission under the act.”¹⁶⁶

c. FPA section 21

42. Precedent construing FPA section 21 further strengthens our view that Congress provided the right of eminent domain under NGA section 7(h) so as to prevent states from interfering with the Commission’s regulation of interstate natural gas facilities. As noted in the Senate Report¹⁶⁷ and in the Petition,¹⁶⁸ FPA section 21 served as the model for NGA section 7(h). FPA section 21 provides eminent domain authority to a licensee for a Commission-approved hydroelectric project for lands necessary to project “construction, maintenance, or operation.”¹⁶⁹

43. In the Energy Policy Act of 1992, Congress amended FPA section 21 to restrict a licensee’s ability to exercise eminent domain to acquire state-owned lands.¹⁷⁰ While Congress also amended parts of the NGA, it left section 7(h) unchanged. Notably, NGA section 7(h) was drafted to “follow[] substantially” the unamended version of the eminent domain provision of section 21 of the FPA.¹⁷¹ And though the Third Circuit relied on “context” to dispute the lack of similar language in the NGA and the FPA—i.e., the fact that the FPA was amended after *Union Gas*¹⁷² permitted Congress to abrogate state

¹⁶⁶ Id. at 3 (emphasis added).

¹⁶⁷ Id. at 1.

¹⁶⁸ Petition at 23.

¹⁶⁹ 16 U.S.C. § 814 (2018).

¹⁷⁰ See Energy Policy Act of 1992, Pub. L. 102-486, 106 Stat. 2776 (1992) (limiting the ability of a hydroelectric licensee to use “the right of eminent domain under this section to acquire any lands or other property that, prior to the date of enactment of the Energy Policy Act of 1992, were owned by a State or political subdivision thereof and were part of or included within any public park, recreation area or wildlife refuge established under State or local law.”); see also H.R. Rep. No. 102-474, at 99 (noting that the pre-amendment “current law” under FPA section 21 of the power of eminent domain conferred by a FERC hydropower license included “the power to condemn lands owned by States or local levels of government”).

¹⁷¹ S. Rep. No. 80-429, at 1.

¹⁷² Union Gas Co., 491 U.S. 1, overruled by Seminole Tribe of Fla., 517 U.S. at 66.

sovereign immunity under the Commerce Clause, but before the Supreme Court overruled *Union Gas*¹⁷³—we note that the legislative history of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 makes no reference to the status of Supreme Court precedent on state sovereign immunity. In any event, the “best evidence of Congress’s intent is the text of the statute,”¹⁷⁴ and we rely on the text that Congress ultimately chose (or did not choose) for the same right in two analogous statutes administered by the same agency.¹⁷⁵ Therefore, we agree with PennEast¹⁷⁶ that the congressional choice to restrict private licensees’ eminent-domain authority under FPA section 21—but not private certificate holders’ authority under NGA section 7(h)—shows that Congress did not intend for condemnations under NGA section 7(h) to be subject to the restrictions Congress later imposed in amendments to FPA section 21.¹⁷⁷

44. Riverkeeper emphasizes that the Third Circuit rejected arguments suggesting that because Congress amended the FPA, but chose not to amend the NGA, that Congress intended to allow the exercise of eminent domain over state-owned lands pursuant to the NGA.¹⁷⁸ Riverkeeper asserts that if Congress intended to remove a state’s sovereign immunity in relation to interstate natural gas pipelines, it could have done so when drafting the language of the NGA, but it did not.¹⁷⁹ Specifically, Riverkeeper takes issue

¹⁷³ See In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 112 n.20.

¹⁷⁴ United States v. Schneider, 14 F.3d 876, 879 (3d Cir. 1994).

¹⁷⁵ See Hughes, 136 S. Ct. at 1298 n.10 (recognizing that relevant provisions of the FPA and the NGA are “analogous”); Lafferty v. St. Riel, 495 F.3d 72, 81-82 (3d Cir. 2007) (describing “the common canon of statutory construction that similar statutes are to be construed similarly”); Ky. Utils. Co. v. FERC, 760 F.2d 1321, 1325 n.6 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (“It is, of course, well settled that the comparable provisions of the Natural Gas Act and the Federal Power Act are to be construed in pari materia.”).

¹⁷⁶ See Petition at 22 & n.35 (observing that, where Congress intends to restrict a delegation of its eminent domain authority to exclude state-owned lands, “it has done so expressly”).

¹⁷⁷ See Loughrin v. United States, 573 U.S. 351, 358 (2014) (“We have often noted that when ‘Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another’—let alone in the very next provision—this Court ‘presume[s]’ that Congress intended a difference in meaning.”) (quoting Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23 (1983)).

¹⁷⁸ Riverkeeper Protest at 11.

¹⁷⁹ Id. at 10.

with the “imput[ation] [of] congressional intent and interpretation from one law to another because Congress amended the language of one law and not the other.”¹⁸⁰ We disagree and find the eminent domain provisions of FPA section 21 (as it read prior to 1992) and NGA section 7(h) should be read in pari materia.¹⁸¹

45. The relationship between these two statutes is critical because, while the Supreme Court has not addressed the scope of a pipeline’s delegated authority under NGA section 7(h), the Supreme Court’s decision in *City of Tacoma v. Taxpayers of Tacoma*¹⁸² directly addressed the question whether a hydroelectric licensee may condemn state land pursuant to a license granted under FPA section 21.¹⁸³ The Supreme Court answered that question in the affirmative, finding that “the very issue upon which respondents stand here [in City of Tacoma] was raised and litigated in the Court of Appeals [in *Washington Department of Game*¹⁸⁴] and decided by its judgment.”¹⁸⁵ City of Tacoma emphasized that Congress intended to commit all questions associated with the issuance of a license—including the legal competence of the licensee to condemn state land—to the ¹⁸⁰ Id. at 11.

¹⁸¹ The Supreme Court “has routinely relied on NGA cases in determining the scope of the FPA, and vice versa.” Hughes, 136 S. Ct. at 1298 n.10 (citation omitted) (recognizing provisions of the FPA and NGA to be “analogous”); Ark. La. Gas Co. v. Hall, 453 U.S. 571, 577 n.7 (1981) (following its “established practice of citing interchangeably decisions interpreting the pertinent sections of the [FPA and NGA]” due to the relevant provisions being “substantially identical”) (citations omitted).

¹⁸² 357 U.S. 320 (1958) (City of Tacoma).

¹⁸³ See id. at 323 (“The question presented for decision here is whether under the facts of this case the City of Tacoma has acquired federal eminent domain power and capacity to take, upon the payment of just compensation, a fish hatchery owned and operated by the State of Washington, by virtue of the license issued to the City under the Federal Power Act and more particularly [§] 21 thereof.”); id. at 333 (“We come now to the core of the controversy between the parties, namely, whether the license issued by the Commission under the Federal Power Act to the City of Tacoma gave it capacity to act under that federal license in constructing the project and delegated to it federal eminent domain power to take upon the payment of just compensation, the State’s fish hatchery—essential to the construction of the project—in the absence of state legislation specifically conferring such authority.”).

¹⁸⁴ State of Wash. Dep’t of Game v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 207 F.2d 391 (9th Cir. 1953) (Washington Department of Game).

¹⁸⁵ City of Tacoma, 357 U.S. at 339.

Commission alone, with judicial review of the Commission’s orders to take place exclusively in the relevant court of appeals or, following such direct review, in the Supreme Court:

Hence, upon judicial review of the Commission’s order, all objections to the order, to the license it directs to be issued, and to the legal competence of the licensee to execute its terms, must be made in the Court of Appeals or not at all. For Congress, acting within its powers, has declared that the Court of Appeals shall have ‘exclusive jurisdiction’ to review such orders, and that its judgment ‘shall be final,’ subject to review by this Court upon certiorari or certification. Such statutory finality need not be labeled res judicata, estoppel, collateral estoppel, waiver or the like either by Congress or the courts.¹⁸⁶

46. City of Tacoma carefully examined the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Washington Department of Game that reviewed the Commission’s licensing orders and rejected Washington’s contentions “that the City does not have ‘any right to take or destroy property of the State’ and ‘cannot act’ in accordance with the terms of its federal license.”¹⁸⁷ Thus, the Supreme Court found that the Ninth Circuit had already decided “the very issue” raised by Washington in City of Tacoma.¹⁸⁸ Rejecting Washington’s claim that the Ninth Circuit had not actually decided that an FPA section 21 licensee can condemn state land, the Supreme Court admonished that “it cannot be doubted that [question] could and should have been [raised in the Ninth Circuit], for that was the court to which Congress had given ‘exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, modify, or set aside’ the Commission’s order[,]”¹⁸⁹ adding that “the State may not reserve the point, for another round of piecemeal litigation . . .”¹⁹⁰

47. City of Tacoma and Washington Department of Game relied heavily on the Supreme Court’s earlier decision in First Iowa Hydro-Electric. Co-op.,¹⁹¹ issued a year

¹⁸⁶ Id. at 336-37 (quoting FPA section 313, 16 U.S.C. § 825l(b)).

¹⁸⁷ City of Tacoma, 357 U.S. at 338 (quoting Wash. Dep’t. of Game, 207 F.2d at 396).

¹⁸⁸ Id. at 339.

¹⁸⁹ Id.

¹⁹⁰ Id.

¹⁹¹ First Iowa Hydro-Elec. Co-op. v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 328 U.S. 152 (1946) (First Iowa).

before NGA section 7(h) was enacted, which held that states may not assert “veto power” over a Commission-licensed hydroelectric project by purporting to require receipt of a state permit “as a condition precedent to securing a federal license for the same project under the Federal Power Act.”¹⁹² That was impermissible because “[s]uch a veto power easily could destroy the effectiveness of the federal act” since it “would subordinate to the control of the State the ‘comprehensive’ planning which the Act provides shall depend upon the judgment of the [] Commission or other representatives of the Federal Government.”¹⁹³ It does not appear that the Eleventh Amendment was raised in City of Tacoma or Washington Department of Game. However, given the Supreme Court’s acceptance of the proposition that licensees must be able to condemn state land in order to make federal licensing jurisdiction fully effective under the original text of FPA

¹⁹² Id. at 164.

¹⁹³ Id. The Court emphasized that the FPA “was a major undertaking involving a major change of national policy” and “[t]hat it was the intention of Congress to secure a comprehensive development of national resources” such that “[t]he detailed provisions of the Act providing for the federal plan of regulation leave no room or need for conflicting state controls.” Id. at 180-81. City of Tacoma summarized First Iowa as holding that “state laws cannot prevent the Federal Power Commission from issuing a license or bar the licensee from acting under the license to build a dam.” City of Tacoma, 357 U.S. at 339 (quoting Wash. Dep’t. of Game, 207 F.2d at 396). The Court’s emphasis on the effectiveness of federal hydroelectric licenses against state resistance was reiterated in Federal Power Commission v. Oregon, 349 U.S. 435 (1955), which explained:

To allow Oregon to veto such use, by requiring the State’s additional permission, would result in the very duplication of regulatory control precluded by the First Iowa decision. . . . No such duplication of authority is called for by the Act. The Court of Appeals in the instant case agrees. . . . And see State of Washington Department of Game v. Federal Power Commission, Authorization of this project, therefore, is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the [] Commission, unless that jurisdiction is modified by other federal legislation.

Id. at 445-46 (footnotes and citations omitted); cf. Fed. Power Comm’n v. Tuscarora Indian Nation, 362 U.S. 99, 118-19, 120 (1960) (holding that 25 U.S.C. § 177, which prevents “conveyance of lands, or of any title or claim thereto, from any Indian nation or tribe of Indians . . . unless the same be made by treaty or convention entered into pursuant to the Constitution,” did not prevent New York from condemning tribal land under a Commission hydroelectric license because “§ 177 is not applicable to the sovereign United States nor, hence, to its licensees to whom Congress has delegated federal eminent domain powers under § 21 of the Federal Power Act.”) (emphasis added).

section 21, it is difficult to conceive that the Supreme Court would reach a contrary conclusion when evaluating the materially identical eminent domain provision in NGA section 7(h). In all events, City of Tacoma does not convey any sense of alarm that FPA section 21, in its original unconstrained form, would “upend a fundamental aspect of our constitutional design.”¹⁹⁴

48. In sum, we think it is evident that NGA section 7(h) was enacted by Congress to enable certificate holders to overcome attempts by states to block the construction of natural gas facilities the Commission determined to be in the public convenience and necessity. In our view, the broad language of NGA section 7(h) was intended to provide certificate holders with expansive eminent domain authority to acquire land owned by private parties or by states.

2. NGA Section 7(h) Delegates its Eminent Domain Authority Only to Certificate Holders, Not the Commission

49. PennEast disputes the Third Circuit’s opinion that the NGA provides a “work-around” where, in the absence of authority for a certificate holder to commence eminent domain proceedings for state property in federal court, an “accountable federal official” could “file condemnation actions and then transfer property interests to the private pipeline developer.”¹⁹⁵ PennEast seeks the Commission’s opinion on whether Congress, through NGA section 7(h), delegated eminent domain authority specifically to certificate holders, or whether NGA section 7(h) authorizes the Commission (or any other federal agency or official) to exercise eminent domain.¹⁹⁶ Riverkeeper argues that, according to the Third Circuit and the plain language of the NGA, Congress did not intend to delegate the federal government’s eminent domain power to certificate holders.¹⁹⁷

50. The Supreme Court has confirmed, in no uncertain terms, that “an agency literally has no power to act . . . unless and until Congress confers power upon it.”¹⁹⁸ As a federal agency, the Commission “is a creature of statute, and ‘if there is no statute conferring ¹⁹⁴ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 112.

¹⁹⁵ Petition at 9 (citing In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 113).

¹⁹⁶ Id. at 25-26.

¹⁹⁷ Riverkeeper Protest at 11-12.

¹⁹⁸ La. Pub. Serv. Comm’n, 476 U.S. at 374.

authority, FERC has none.”¹⁹⁹ NGA section 7(h) states, in pertinent part, that “[w]hen any holder of a certificate of public convenience and necessity cannot acquire by contract, or is unable to agree with the owner of property . . . it may acquire the same by the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the district court of the United States for the district in which such property may be located, or in the State courts.”²⁰⁰ By its plain terms, NGA section 7(h) confers authority to exercise eminent domain to certificate holders alone. And because neither NGA section 7(h) nor any other provision of the NGA authorizes the Commission to exercise eminent domain, the Commission lacks statutory authority to do so. Riverkeeper and Homeowners Against Land Taking – PennEast, Inc. (HALT) concede that the Commission has previously found that it has no role in eminent domain proceedings that result from the issuance of a certificate and that it is not involved in the acquisition of property rights through those proceedings.²⁰¹

51. Nor does the legislative history of NGA section 7(h) suggest that Congress sought to empower the Commission to bring condemnation actions in state or federal court. In first presenting what would become NGA section 7(h) to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in 1947, Representative Schwabe stated in a memorandum to the Committee that as Congress had “invoked its constitutional authority to regulate interstate commerce” via the NGA, Congress should then protect this commerce by conferring “the right of eminent domain upon those natural-gas companies” that have received a certificate from the Commission.²⁰² Statements in the House

¹⁹⁹ Tesoro Alaska Co., 778 F.3d at 1038 (citing Atl. City Elec., 295 F.3d at 8); see also Nat. Res. Def. Council v. Nat'l. Highway Traffic Safety Admin., 894 F.3d 95, 108 (2d Cir. 2018) (“[A]n agency may only act within the authority granted to it by statute.”).

²⁰⁰ 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h) (emphasis added).

²⁰¹ See Riverkeeper Protest at 3 (citing Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33); HALT Motion to Intervene at 1; see also, e.g., Certificate Rehearing Order, 164 FERC ¶ 61,098 at P 33 (“The Commission does not have the authority to limit a pipeline company’s use of eminent domain once the company has received its certificate of public convenience and necessity.”).

²⁰² Amendments to the Natural Gas Act: Hearing on H.R. 2956 Before the H. Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, 80th Cong. 380 (1947) (memorandum of Rep. Schwabe, Member, H. Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce).

committee hearings, both from industry²⁰³ and Congressional representatives,²⁰⁴ reiterated that certificate holders – not the Commission – would hold the power of eminent domain granted under NGA section 7(h). And, as referenced above, the Senate Report for section 7(h) identified the purpose of the amendment as “confer[ring] the right of eminent domain upon those natural gas companies which have qualified under the Natural Gas Act to carry out and perform the terms of any certificate of public convenience and necessity acquired from the [Commission] under the act.”²⁰⁵ Notably, at no point did Congress consider conferring eminent domain under NGA section 7(h), or any other section of the NGA, on the Commission.

52. Beyond the question whether the agency has statutory authority to exercise the right of eminent domain, there remains the question, practically speaking, how the Commission could wield any such authority. PennEast adds that the NGA “is silent about numerous important considerations that would need to be addressed were the Commission to bring a condemnation action”²⁰⁶ Such important considerations include how the Commission would pay just compensation in the absence of an appropriation to do so, and the process of transferring the property from the Commission to the pipeline.²⁰⁷ We need not address such practical considerations because, as noted above, the NGA does not grant the Commission any authority to bring condemnation actions or transfer land condemned pursuant to a section 7 certificate of public convenience and necessity to another party.²⁰⁸

53. Although NGA section 7(h) requires the Commission’s determination as to which land may be condemned for the public convenience and necessity, it delegates eminent

²⁰³ See, e.g., id. at 609 (statement of John M. Crimmins, representing Koppers Co., Inc.) (referring to the proposed amendment to the NGA as “a change in the act to give natural-gas pipe-line companies the right of eminent domain.”); id. at 541 (statement of David T. Searls, representing Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.) (noting that this amendment would cure the government’s “fail[ure] to provide a similar right of eminent domain” in the NGA as in the FPA).

²⁰⁴ See id. at 613 (statement of Rep. Carson, Member, H. Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce) (stating his belief that “we should do something to give the gas companies [eminent domain].”).

²⁰⁵ S. Rep. No. 80-429, at 3 (emphasis added).

²⁰⁶ Petition at 25.

²⁰⁷ Id.

²⁰⁸ See supra P 50.

domain authority solely to certificate holders and confers no such authority upon the Commission. As a result, contrary to the opinion of the Third Circuit, we conclude that the NGA does not authorize a “work-around” that enables the Commission, rather than private pipeline companies, to acquire state-owned property through the exercise of eminent domain.

3. This Commission Lacks Authority to Determine the Constitutionality of Congress’s Delegation of the Federal Exemption from State Sovereign Immunity to Certificate Holders under NGA Section 7(h)

54. PennEast states that Congress, in delegating eminent domain authority to certificate holders, necessarily delegated the federal government’s exemption from a state’s claim of sovereign immunity pursuant to the Eleventh Amendment.²⁰⁹ PennEast further suggests that, contrary to the doubts raised by the Third Circuit, this delegation of the federal government’s exemption from state sovereign immunity claims raises “no constitutional difficulty.”²¹⁰

55. While we find that a certificate holder’s ability to condemn state land when necessary to fulfill the certificate is a necessary and essential part of the Commission’s administration of the NGA,²¹¹ we deny PennEast’s request to address the constitutional sufficiency of that delegation in the context of this discretionary declaratory order. Justice Harlan famously admonished that “[a]djudication of the constitutionality of congressional enactments . . . [is] beyond the jurisdiction of administrative agencies.”²¹²

²⁰⁹ Petition at 27-33.

²¹⁰ Id. at 33-34.

²¹¹ See supra notes 143 (quoting Thatcher), 150 (quoting Tenneco Atlantic and describing the discussion of Carmack therein), 160 (describing the Commission’s rationale in Islander East, East Tennessee, and Tenneco Atlantic), and 193 (discussing the Supreme Court’s interpretation of FPA section 21).

²¹² Oestreich v. Selective Serv. Sys. Local Bd. No. 11, 393 U.S. 233, 242 (1968) (Harlan, J., concurring); see also Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 211 (1962) (“Deciding . . . whether the action of the branch exceeds whatever authority has been committed, is itself a delicate exercise in constitutional interpretation and is a responsibility of this Court as ultimate interpreter of the Constitution.”); Pub. Utils. Comm’n of State of Cal. v. United States, 355 U.S. 534, 540 (1958) (“[W]here the only question is whether it is constitutional to fasten the administrative procedure onto the litigant, the administrative agency may be defied and judicial relief sought as the only effective way of protecting the asserted constitutional right.”).

The federal courts of appeals have confirmed this basic constraint in most circumstances²¹³ and the Commission typically avoids opining on constitutional matters unless they are necessary to a particular decision.²¹⁴ Therefore, it would be inappropriate for the Commission to purport to decide certain constitutional questions implicated by the instant Petition. These questions include: whether a condemnation action under NGA section 7(h) is a suit in law or equity as those terms are used in the Eleventh Amendment; whether Congress's delegation to certificate holders concerning condemnation of all "necessary" land was sufficient to overcome state immunity under the Eleventh Amendment; and whether Congress's delegation to certificate holders of the federal exemption from Eleventh Amendment immunity is a constitutionally permissible exercise of Congressional authority under the Commerce Clause. Accordingly, we decline to provide an opinion on those questions.

C. Implications of the Third Circuit's Decision

56. While we decline to reach the constitutional validity of Congress's delegation of eminent domain to condemn state land under NGA section 7(h), the implications of the Third Circuit's opinion merit discussion here. The Third Circuit acknowledged that its holding "may disrupt how the natural gas industry, which has used the NGA to construct interstate pipelines over State-owned land for the past eighty years, operates."²¹⁵ That is correct.²¹⁶ If the Third Circuit's opinion stands, we believe it would have profoundly adverse impacts on the development of the nation's interstate natural gas transportation system, and will significantly undermine how the natural gas transportation industry has operated for decades.

57. The NGA provides that, upon a determination by the Commission that a natural gas transportation project is required by the public convenience and necessity, the ²¹³ See supra note 118.

²¹⁴ See Tenneco Atlantic, 1 FERC at 65,203-04 & n.53 (citing Thatcher, 180 F.2d 644); East Tennessee, 102 FERC ¶ 61,225 at P 68; Islander East, 102 FERC ¶ 61,054 at PP 128, 131. As a general matter, reasoned decisionmaking under the Administrative Procedure Act requires the Commission to "answer[] objections that on their face seem legitimate." PSEG Energy Res. & Trade LLC v. FERC, 665 F.3d 203, 209 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (quoting PPL Wallingford Energy LLC v. FERC, 419 F.3d 1194, 1198 (D.C. Cir. 2005) (quoting Canadian Ass'n of Petroleum Producers v. FERC, 254 F.3d 289, 299 (D.C. Cir. 2001))).

²¹⁵ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 113.

²¹⁶ Cf. MCI Telecomms. Corp. v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 512 U.S. 218, 228 (1994) (agreeing "that the French Revolution 'modified' the status of the French nobility").

certificate holder shall have the authority to acquire “the necessary right-of-way to construct, operate, and maintain” the project.²¹⁷ This is a “necessary tool[] to make effective the orders and certificates of the Commission.”²¹⁸

58. The Third Circuit’s decision will substantially impair full application of the NGA, including NGA section 7(h), as well as impair Congress’s intent in providing certificate holders with this vital tool because it would allow states to nullify the effect of Commission orders affecting state land—and, apparently, private land in which the state has an interest—through the simple expedient of declining to participate in an eminent domain proceeding brought to effectuate a Commission certificate. It would likewise impair the NGA’s superordinate goal of ensuring the public has access to reliable, affordable supplies of natural gas.²¹⁹ As stated above, the Commission has no statutory authority or mechanism by which to condemn property and transfer it to certificate holders.²²⁰ As a result of the Third Circuit’s decision, states would be free to block natural gas infrastructure projects that cross state lands by refusing to grant easements for the construction and operation of the projects on land for which the state has a possessory interest, regardless of any Commission finding that a particular project is in the public interest under the NGA.²²¹ Preventing land owners and states from impeding interstate ²¹⁷ 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h); see also supra PP 25-26.

²¹⁸ Amendments to the Natural Gas Act: Hearing on S.1028 Before the Sen. Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, 80th Cong. 12 (1947) (statement of Sen. Moore).

²¹⁹ E. Tenn. Nat. Gas Co. v. Sage, 361 F.3d 808, 830 (4th Cir. 2004) (“Congress passed the Natural Gas Act and gave gas companies condemnation power to insure that consumers would have access to an adequate supply of natural gas at reasonable prices.”); see NAACP v. Fed. Power Comm’n, 425 U.S. 669-70 (recognizing that “the principal purpose of . . . [the NGA is] to encourage the orderly development of plentiful supplies of . . . natural gas at reasonable prices”); accord Myersville Citizens for a Rural Cnty., Inc. v. FERC, 783 F.3d at 1307 (quoting NAACP, 425 U.S. at 669-70). See generally El Paso Nat. Gas Co., L.L.C., 169 FERC ¶ 61,133, at PP 32-39 (2019) (McNamee, Comm’r, concurring) (detailing the evolution of “enacted . . . legislation promoting the development and use of natural gas”); id. at P 24 (“Each of these textual provisions [in NGA section 7] illuminate the ultimate purpose of the NGA: to ensure that the public has access to natural gas because Congress considered such access to be in the public interest.”).

²²⁰ See supra PP 49-53.

²²¹ We note that the court’s interpretation would permit states to block construction both on land a state owns (e.g., along or across all state roads and the bottoms of navigable water bodies), and on land over which the state asserts some lesser natural gas transportation projects was an explicit objective of Congress in amending the NGA to include section 7(h).²²² Thus, the Third Circuit’s opinion casts serious doubt on the effectiveness of the Commission’s certificates of public convenience and necessity and the Commission’s ability to satisfy its statutory NGA mandate.

59. Riverkeeper disagrees that In re PennEast undermines the Commission’s administration of the NGA, stating that the decision provides for consistency with the Constitution and preserves the sovereign rights of states.²²³ Relying heavily on the questionable federal work-around discussed above,²²⁴ New Jersey similarly contends that PennEast “overstates the purported consequences of that decision.”²²⁵ However, several commenters, including interstate pipeline companies, natural gas utilities, and non-governmental organizations, as well as the petitioner, raise concerns about the ramifications of the Third Circuit’s opinion. PennEast and INGAA²²⁶ comment on the “immediate chilling effect” the Third Circuit’s opinion would have on the development of interstate natural gas infrastructure by providing states with a mechanism by which they could nullify a certificate of public convenience and necessity.²²⁷

60. PennEast notes that New Jersey claims possessory interests in approximately 15 percent of the land in the state.²²⁸ Even if a pipeline route were designed specifically property interests (e.g., conservation easements). If state-owned lands are treated as impassable barriers for purposes of condemnation, the circumvention of those barriers, if possible at all, would require the condemnation of more private land at significantly greater cost and with correspondingly greater environmental impact. If lands over which a state has asserted any property interest also become impassable barriers for purposes of condemnation, a state could unilaterally prevent interstate transportation of an essential energy commodity through its borders, thus eviscerating the purpose of NGA section 7(h).

²²² See supra PP 28-48.

²²³ Riverkeeper Protest at 6.

²²⁴ See supra PP 49-53.

²²⁵ New Jersey Protest at 19, 23-24.

²²⁶ INGAA is a trade association advocating regulatory and legislative positions of the vast majority of the interstate natural gas pipeline companies in the U.S.

²²⁷ Petition at 15; see INGAA Comments at 11.

²²⁸ Petition at 12 (“New Jersey currently claims a property interest in more than 1,300 square miles pursuant to its Green Acres and farmland programs. This amount to avoid state lands, PennEast states that property owners could simply grant conservation easements or other non-possessory property interests to states or their agencies with the aim of vetoing or re-routing pipelines.²²⁹ INGAA echoes these concerns, alleging that a certificate holder could “be stuck in a never-ending loop requiring endless reroutes to avoid properties in which the state had no interest when FERC was reviewing the proposal.”²³⁰

61. In contrast, Watershed Institute disputes the concern that property owners could grant conservation easements to states in an attempt to block a pipeline, stating that the process of obtaining and undoing a conservation easement in New Jersey is “extremely burdensome and can only occur under limited circumstances.”²³¹ As we discuss below, however,²³² the impacts of the Third Circuit’s decision are not limited to New Jersey, which has already proposed new legislation for the purpose of blocking natural gas pipelines.²³³ Accordingly, for the Commission to faithfully administer the NGA, it cannot rely on states being measured in granting conservation easements.

62. INGAA further comments that the uncertainty created by the Third Circuit’s decision will exacerbate the risk associated with constructing and operating interstate represents more than 15 percent of the 8,729 square miles of land in New Jersey. That figure does not include lands owned in fee by [New Jersey], such as state forests, state parks, and the bottoms of all navigable waterbodies[.]” (citations omitted).

²²⁹ Id. at 9.

²³⁰ INGAA Comments at 13.

²³¹ Watershed Institute Motion to Intervene at 2.

²³² See infra P 64.

²³³ See, e.g., Restricts use of eminent domain by private pipeline companies to those demonstrating pipeline is in the public interest and that agree to certain regulation by BPU, A.B. 2944, 218th Leg., 1st Ann. Sess. (N.J. 2018); Restricts use of eminent domain by private pipeline companies to those demonstrating pipeline is in the public interest and that agree to certain regulation by BPU, S.B. 799, 218th Leg., 1st Ann. Sess. (N.J. 2018); Prevents use of condemnation to acquire residential and other private property under redevelopment laws, S.B. 302, 218th Leg., 1st Ann. Sess. (N.J. 2018); Prevents use of condemnation to acquire residential and other private property under redevelopment laws, A.B. 947, 218th Leg., 1st Ann. Sess. (N.J. 2018); Proposes constitutional amendment to restrict use of condemnation power against non-blighted property for private economic development purposes, A.C.R. 27, 218th Leg., 1st Ann. Sess. (N.J. 2018).

natural gas facilities, thereby raising the cost of financing the projects.²³⁴ INGAA states that the veto power the Third Circuit’s opinion would afford states would expand the risk associated with projects “exponentially,” as being granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Commission would no longer provide assurance that the approved route is “truly final.”²³⁵ As a result of this higher level of risk and uncertainty, “investors will either increase the interest rate at which they are willing to lend capital or will simply choose to invest elsewhere.”²³⁶ This would result in either increased costs for natural gas consumers or greater supply constraints as a result of a pipeline’s inability to secure capital for construction.²³⁷

63. Other commenters raise concerns about the impact of the Third Circuit’s decision on local distribution companies (LDCs) and, ultimately, consumers. The APGA²³⁸ states that the court’s decision will prevent LDCs from securing additional transportation capacity or benefiting from new areas of natural gas supply.²³⁹ The AGA²⁴⁰ comments that LDCs, as state-regulated utilities, have an “obligation to provide natural gas service to retail customers” and that the Third Circuit’s decision will jeopardize LDCs’ ability to meet this obligation.²⁴¹ According to the AGA, “utilities develop and implement detailed long-term supply plans” to ensure the needs of consumers are met, and utilities enter into transportation agreements in order to “have natural gas supplies available . . . to respond to current and future customer demands and to meet operational needs.”²⁴² New Jersey Natural Gas Company, a regulated New Jersey natural gas distribution utility, states that the “interstate natural gas transportation pipelines serving New Jersey are not only

²³⁴ INGAA Comments at 11.

²³⁵ Id.

²³⁶ Id.

²³⁷ Id.

²³⁸ The APGA is an association representing over 730 publicly owned natural gas distribution systems across thirty-seven states.

²³⁹ See APGA Comments at 3.

²⁴⁰ The AGA represents over 200 natural gas utilities, which together deliver natural gas to approximately 95 percent of the nation’s natural gas customers.

²⁴¹ AGA Comments at 9-12.

²⁴² Id. at 9-10.

running regularly at full capacity – they are fully subscribed.”²⁴³ New Jersey Natural Gas states that if interstate pipeline companies such as PennEast are frustrated in their attempts to provide this needed additional capacity “a significant outage event is a realistic threat.”²⁴⁴

64. Significantly, the impacts of the Third Circuit’s opinion may not be limited to New Jersey, or to other states within the Third Circuit. PennEast asserts that the decision will influence courts in other jurisdictions, particularly due to the limited case law and Commission precedent on the matter.²⁴⁵ Indeed, district courts in Maryland and Texas have issued decisions blocking the condemnation of state land pursuant to a Commission-issued certificate on Eleventh Amendment grounds.²⁴⁶ The decision of the District Court for the District of Maryland is currently pending appeal before the Fourth Circuit. TC Energy states that its subsidiary, Columbia Gas Transmission, LLC (Columbia), the certificate holder in the pending Fourth Circuit proceeding, has been prevented from accessing a “small but necessary portion of land, severely impeding Columbia’s ability to construct a project that will serve demonstrated demand and that the Commission has determined to be in the public interest[.]”²⁴⁷ TC Energy further notes that without the ability to exercise eminent domain over lands in which the state holds a possessory interest “[the] ability to develop needed natural gas infrastructure . . . will be severely hampered to the detriment of consumers[.]”²⁴⁸

65. As discussed above, we recognize the potential impact that a state could have in preventing the construction of natural gas pipeline projects authorized by the Commission. For that reason, we believe it is beneficial for the Commission, in its capacity as the agency charged with administering the NGA, to provide here its interpretation of how the NGA’s grant of eminent domain authority to certificate holders is intended to operate. We emphasize our “exclusive jurisdiction over the transportation

²⁴³ New Jersey Natural Gas Company Comments at 4.

²⁴⁴ Id. at 5.

²⁴⁵ Petition at 10-11.

²⁴⁶ See Columbia Gas Transmission, LLC v. .12 Acres of Land, More or Less, No. 19-cv-1444 (D. Md. Aug. 22, 2019) (appeal filed Sept. 20, 2019); Sabine Pipe Line, LLC v. Orange Cty., Tex., 327 F.R.D. 131 (E.D. Tex. 2017).

²⁴⁷ TC Energy’s Motion to Intervene and Comments at 19.

²⁴⁸ Id. at 3.

and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce for resale.”²⁴⁹ Therefore, state and local agencies may not, through the application of state or local laws, prohibit or unreasonably delay the construction or operation of facilities approved by the Commission.²⁵⁰ Indeed, that statement is routinely included in the orders the Commission issues granting certificates of public convenience and necessity.²⁵¹ ²⁴⁹ Schneidewind, 485 U.S. at 300-01 (citing N. Nat. Gas Co., 372 U.S. at 89); see also 15 U.S.C. § 717(b).

²⁵⁰ See 15 U.S.C. § 717r(d)(2) (state or federal agency’s failure to act on a permit is inconsistent with federal law); Schneidewind, 485 U.S. at 310 (state regulation that interferes with the Commission’s regulatory authority over the transportation of natural gas is preempted) (quoting N. Nat. Gas Co., 372 U.S. at 91-92); Dominion Transmission, Inc. v. Summers, 723 F.3d 238, 245 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (noting that state and local regulation is preempted by the NGA to the extent it conflicts with federal regulation, or would delay the construction and operation of facilities approved by the Commission); Williams Nat. Gas Co., 890 F.2d at 264 (“We hold that the proceedings in the state court that resulted in the order enjoining Williams’ exercise of rights granted in the FERC certificate constituted an impermissible collateral attack on a FERC order in contravention of § 19 of the NGA.”); Nat. Gas Pipeline Co. v. Iowa State Commerce Comm’n, 369 F. Supp. 156, 160 (S.D. Iowa 1974) (finding state permit requirements inapplicable to federal eminent domain procedures under the NGA); cf. City of Tacoma, 357 U.S. at 328, 341 (upholding the finality of a circuit court’s determination that “state laws cannot prevent the Federal Power Commission from issuing a license or bar the licensee from acting under the license” due to the suit being an “impermissible collateral attack” on the circuit court’s decision) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); First Iowa, 328 U.S. at 181 (“The detailed provisions of the Federal Power Act providing for the federal plan of regulation leave no room or need for conflicting state controls.”); Hoopa Valley Tribe v. FERC, 913 F.3d 1099, 1104 (D.C. Cir. 2019) (finding that the practice of states “shelving” Clean Water Act section 401 water quality certifications through a withdrawal and refiling scheme “usurp[s] FERC’s control over whether and when a federal license will issue” and is contrary to the FPA); Wash. Dep’t of Game, 207 F.2d at 396 (“[W]e conclude that the state laws cannot prevent the Federal Power Commission from issuing a license or bar the licensee from acting under the license . . .”).

²⁵¹ E.g., Transcon. Gas Pipe Line Co., LLC, 169 FERC ¶ 61,051 at P 85 (“Any state or local permits issued with respect to the jurisdictional facilities authorized herein must be consistent with the conditions of this certificate. The Commission encourages cooperation between interstate pipelines and local authorities. However, this does not mean that state and local agencies, through application of state or local laws, may

IV. Conclusion

66. In enacting the NGA, Congress established a carefully crafted comprehensive scheme in which the Commission was charged with vindicating the public interest inherent in the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate and foreign commerce, in significant part through the issuance of certificates of public convenience and necessity for interstate gas pipelines. A key aspect of this scheme was the remit to natural gas companies of the ability to exercise, where necessary, the power of eminent domain to acquire lands needed for projects authorized by the Commission. We here confirm our strong belief that NGA section 7(h) empowers natural gas companies, and not the Commission, to exercise eminent domain and that this authority applies to lands in which states hold interest. A contrary finding would be flatly inconsistent with Congressional intent, as expressed in the text of NGA section 7(h), which is also supported by the legislative history.

The Commission orders:

The petition for declaratory order is granted in part, and denied in part, as discussed in the body of this order.

By the Commission. Commissioner Glick is dissenting with a separate statement attached.

(S E A L)

Kimberly D. Bose,
Secretary.

prohibit or unreasonably delay the construction or operation of facilities approved by this Commission.”).

Appendix A

Timely Motions to Intervene

American Gas Association
American Public Gas Association
Angela A. Karas
Calpine Energy Services, L.P.
Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc.
Cynthia Niciecki
Daria M. Karas
Delaware Riverkeeper Network
Derrick Kappler
Environmental Defense Fund
Frank R. Karas
HALT – PennEast (Homeowners Against Land Taking – PennEast, Inc.)
Interstate Natural Gas Association of America
Jodi McKinney (Delaware Township Committee)
John T. Leiser
Kelly Kappler
Kinder Morgan, Inc Entities, et al.²⁵²
Leslie Sauer
Maya K. van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper
Michael Spille
New Jersey Conservation Foundation
New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, et al. (collectively, the State of New Jersey)²⁵³
New Jersey Division of Rate Counsel
New Jersey Natural Gas Company
Niskanen Center

²⁵² This includes the following entities: Colorado Interstate Gas Company, L.L.C.; Wyoming Interstate Company, L.L.C.; Southern Natural Gas Company, L.L.C.; Tennessee Gas Pipeline Company, L.L.C.; Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America LLC; El Paso Natural Gas Company, L.L.C.; TransColorado Gas Transmission Company LLC; Mojave Pipeline Company, L.L.C.; Bear Creek Storage Company, L.L.C.; Cheyenne Plains Gas Pipeline Company, L.L.C.; Elba Express Company, L.L.C.; Kinder Morgan Louisiana Pipeline LLC; and Southern LNG Company, L.L.C.

²⁵³ The State of New Jersey's motion to intervene includes, but is not limited to, the following agencies: the New Jersey Board of Public Utilities; the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection; and the Delaware and Raritan Canal Commission.

Patricia A. Oceanak
PSEG Energy Resources & Trade, LLC
Richard D. LaFevre and Pamela LaFevre
Samuel H. Thompson
Southern Star Central Gas Pipeline, Inc.
Stony Brook Millstone Watershed Association
TC Energy Corporation
Tellurian Pipeline LLC
Township of Holland, Hunterdon County, New Jersey
Township of Hopewell, Mercer County, New Jersey
Township of Kingwood, Hunterdon County, New Jersey
Township of West Amwell, Hunterdon County, New Jersey
Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Company, LLC
Vincent DiBianca
Washington Crossing Audubon Society

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION

PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC

Docket No. RP20-41-000

(Issued January 30, 2020)

GLICK, Commissioner, dissenting:

1. I dissent¹ from today's order on both procedural and substantive grounds. There is no need for the Commission to insert itself into what is primarily a constitutional question that is being litigated where those questions belong: The federal courts. Nor is this an area where the Commission has the particular expertise the majority is so quick to claim. The NGA requires the Commission to determine whether an interstate pipeline is required by the public convenience and necessity.² If the Commission finds that a proposed pipeline is so required, section 7(h) of the NGA automatically provides the pipeline developer eminent domain authority without any action or further involvement by the Commission. The congressional intent behind a statutory provision that governs a judicial scheme, which the Commission has no role in administering, is not a subject on which we are especially well-qualified to opine.

2. Turning to the substance of today's order, I disagree with the majority that Congress unambiguously intended section 7(h) to apply state lands. In my view, the evidence simply is not clear one way or the other. The majority's confidence in its conclusion is better evidence of its own ends-oriented decisionmaking than any unambiguous congressional intent.

3. I understand that my colleagues may not like the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (Third Circuit).³ But we do not ordinarily rush out a declaratory order whenever a couple of commissioners disagree with a court. Nothing in today’s order makes a compelling case for why we should be doing so today.

¹ Although I agree with the conclusion in today's order that section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act (NGA), 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h) (2018), delegates eminent domain authority to the holder of an NGA section 7 certificate and not to the Commission, I dissent in full because the Commission should not be issuing this order in the first place. PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064, at PP 49-53 (2020) (Order).

² 15 U.S.C. § 717f(c).

³ In re PennEast Pipeline Co., LLC, 938 F.3d 96 (3d Cir. 2019).

* * *

4. It is not appropriate for the Commission to issue a declaratory order in an effort to buttress a private party’s litigation efforts. Moreover, as the majority notes, the important questions presented by PennEast Pipeline Company, LLC’s (PennEast) effort to condemn New Jersey’s property interests “involve[] esoteric matters of constitutional law.”⁴ In other words, the real stakes at issue involve the Eleventh Amendment to the U.S. Constitution; the majority’s attempt to divine congressional intent is just nibbling around the edges. Other than signaling the majority’s dissatisfaction with the Third Circuit, I see little to be achieved by today’s order.

5. The majority contends that today’s order is useful because its interpretation of Congress’s intent in enacting section 7(h) merits deference from the courts. It supports that statement with a single general citation to *Chevron v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc.*⁵ But courts do not afford an agency Chevron deference when the relevant issue was not delegated to the agency to decide. “Deference in accordance with Chevron . . . is warranted only ‘when it appears that Congress delegated authority to the agency generally to make rules carrying the force of law, and that the agency interpretation claiming deference was promulgated in the exercise of that authority.’”⁶ And Chevron deference “is premised on the theory that a statute’s ambiguity constitutes an implicit delegation from Congress to the agency to fill in the statutory gaps.”⁷ That said, ambiguity alone will not always suffice: Congress must also have delegated to the agency in question the authority to fill in that ambiguity.⁸ Where the relevant issues are not ones that Congress has left for the agency to decide, Chevron does not apply.

⁴ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 39.

⁵ Id. P 15. The Commission also asserts, notably without citation, that it has the authority to apply and interpret section 7(h). Id. at P 13. For the reasons discussed below, that is not the case. See infra PP 6-7.

⁶ Gonzales v. Oregon, 546 U.S. 243, 255-56 (2006) (quoting United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 226-27 (2001)); see Fox v. Clinton, 684 F.3d 67, 76 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (explaining that not all agency statutory interpretations qualify for Chevron deference; only those interpretations that meet the criteria outlined in Gonzalez).

⁷ FDA v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 529 U.S. 120, 159 (2000).

⁸ See Atl. City Elec. Co. v. FERC, 295 F.3d 1, 9 (D.C. Cir. 2002) ([M]ere ambiguity in a statute is not evidence of congressional delegation of authority in the first

6. The scope of the eminent domain authority in section 7(h) is not an issue that Congress left for the Commission to decide. Section 7(h) provides a mechanism for a certificate holder to go into court and condemn land that it has been unable to purchase on its own.⁹ The Commission has repeatedly made clear that it has no role to play in the proceedings contemplated by section 7(h) or the actual exercise of eminent domain more generally.¹⁰ As the Commission has explained, eminent domain is an “automatic right” that is incident to the Commission’s public convenience and necessity determination¹¹ and disputes about the exercise of that eminent domain authority are best addressed by the federal courts.¹² instance. Rather, Chevron deference comes into play of course, only as a consequence of statutory ambiguity, and then only if the reviewing court finds an implicit delegation of authority to the agency.” (internal quotation marks and citations omitted) (emphasis in the original)).

⁹ See 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h).

¹⁰ E.g., Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197, at P 74 (2018) (“In NGA section 7(c), Congress gave the Commission jurisdiction to determine if the construction and operation of proposed pipeline facilities are in the public convenience and necessity. Once the Commission makes that determination, in NGA section 7(h), Congress gives the natural gas company authorization to acquire the necessary land or property to construct the approved facilities by the exercise of the right of eminent domain The Commission itself does not grant the pipeline the right to take the property by eminent domain.”); Atl. Coast Pipeline, 161 FERC ¶ 61,042, at PP 66, 77 (2017) (same).

¹¹ Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197 at P 72; see Midcoast Interstate Transmission, Inc. v. FERC, 198 F.3d 960, 973 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (“Once a certificate has been granted, the statute allows the certificate holder to obtain needed private property by eminent domain. The Commission does not have the discretion to deny a certificate holder the power of eminent domain.” (citations omitted)); Atl. Coast Pipeline, 161 FERC ¶ 61,042 at P 78 (“[O]nce a natural gas company obtains a certificate of public convenience and necessity, it may exercise the right of eminent domain in a U.S. District Court or a state court.”).

¹² Mountain Valley Pipeline, LLC, 163 FERC ¶ 61,197 at PP 72-73; see Millennium Pipeline Co., L.L.C., 158 FERC ¶ 61,086, at P 6 (2017) (“Issues related to the acquisition of property rights by a pipeline under the eminent domain provisions of section 7(h) of the Natural Gas Act, including issues regarding compensation, are matters for the applicable state or federal court.”).

7. Because the Commission has no role in implementing or administering the eminent domain authority conveyed by section 7(h), the majority cannot reasonably argue that Congress delegated to the Commission the responsibility to address any ambiguity in that provision.¹³ Questions about the scope of a private party's right to commence an action in federal or state court are not issues that Congress would have given this Commission to decide. Instead, the obvious venue to address those questions in the first instance is those courts themselves. Accordingly, the prospect of securing judicial deference is also not, in my opinion, a valid reason to put out today's order.

8. Turning to the substance of today's order, the majority's conviction that Congress unambiguously intend section 7(h) to apply to state lands is dead wrong. The "evidence" that the majority relies on to argue that the eminent domain authority in section 7(h) applies to state lands is, at best, inapt or susceptible to multiple interpretations. Even viewed as a whole and in a light most charitable to the majority, the evidence discussed in today's order simply does not demonstrate a clear congressional intent one way or another. All today's order proves is that the majority believes that certificate holders should be able to condemn state lands, not that Congress intended that to be the case.

9. The majority begins, as it must, with the text of section 7(h).¹⁴ But there is not much to say. The Commission's two-paragraph discussion consists of one paragraph quoting section 7(h) in full¹⁵ and a second paragraph summarizing how it works.¹⁶ The only substantive point today's order makes about the text of section 7(h) is that Congress did not expressly prohibit condemnation of state lands.¹⁷

10. On that point, I agree. But the absence of an express limitation on condemning state lands is hardly an unambiguous signal that Congress intended section 7 certificate holders to have that authority. After all, section 7(h) also does not contain an express prohibition on condemning federal land and, to my knowledge, no one believes that section 7(h) therefore conveys such authority. The majority references the "broad and ¹³ See, e.g., Atl. City Elec., 295 F.3d at 9; Michigan v. EPA, 268 F.3d 1075, 1082 (D.C. Cir. 2001).

¹⁴ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at PP 33-34; See United States v. Ron Pair Enterprises, Inc., 489 U.S. 235, 241 (1989) ("The task of resolving the dispute over the meaning of [a statutory provision] begins where all such inquiries must begin: with the language of the statute itself.").

¹⁵ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 33.

¹⁶ Id. P 34.

¹⁷ Id.

unqualified reference to ‘the necessary land or property in section 7(h),’” suggesting that this language extends condemnation authority to any land deemed necessary to develop a proposed pipeline.¹⁸ Perhaps, but a more plausible reading is that the word “necessary” acts as a limiting provision, which makes clear that section 7(h) is not a general right of eminent domain and can be deployed only to condemn property that will be used in connection with the pipeline. Under that reading, the term “necessary” does not indicate anything one way or another about section 7(h)’s application to state lands.

11. With that, the majority turns to proffer a discussion of “[j]udicial review of section 7(h).”¹⁹ That discussion cites exactly one section 7(h) case: Thatcher v. Tennessee Gas Company,²⁰ which is entirely irrelevant. Thatcher involved a dispute between a natural gas pipeline and a private landowner, who argued that section 7(h) was unconstitutional because, among other things, it did not regulate interstate commerce and eminent domain authority could not be exercised by a private company.²¹ Based on principles that were well established even then, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit rejected those arguments.²² The court said nothing about the extent of the eminent domain authority conveyed by section 7(h) or whether that authority extended to state lands. Simply put, Thatcher is irrelevant for our purposes, as the majority itself seems to recognize.²³

12. As part of its discussion of “judicial review,” the majority also points to Tenneco Atlantic, a decision issued by an administrative law judge (ALJ) in 1977, thirty years after Congress enacted section 7(h).²⁴ I agree that, in Tenneco Atlantic, the ALJ explained his belief that section 7(h) gave the certificate holder the authority to condemn state land.²⁵ But I disagree that a single ALJ opinion issued three decades after the ¹⁸ Id. (quoting 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h)).

¹⁹ Id. P 35.

²⁰ Thatcher v. Tenn. Gas Transmission Co., 180 F.2d 644, 645 (5th Cir. 1950).

²¹ Id. (summarizing the Thatcher’s arguments).

²² Id. at 646-48; accord Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 29 (noting that the Third Circuit’s opinion does not question these well-established principles).

²³ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 35.

²⁴ Id. P 36.

²⁵ Id.

relevant amendments tells us much, if anything, about the extent of the eminent domain authority that Congress intended to convey in section 7(h).²⁶

13. In addition, the majority points to the Commission’s decision in Islander East, which rejected an Eleventh Amendment argument on the basis that a condemnation action was not a “suit in law or equity”²⁷—exactly the question that today’s order declines to address on the basis that it is outside “the heartland of our quotidian ambit.”²⁸ As the majority recognizes, the Third Circuit dismissed the Commission’s conclusion in Islander East, calling it “an outlier and one that was reached with little, if any, analysis.”²⁹ “More importantly,” the Third Circuit stated, “it is flatly wrong.”³⁰ That sums it up pretty well. I appreciate that the majority likes the outcome in Islander East,³¹ but, as the Third Circuit noted, there is no reasoning or analysis in that order to support that outcome or explain why it is consistent with congressional intent.³² Simply put, it sheds no light on the question before us.

14. Next, the majority turns to cherry-picking examples from the NGA’s legislative history to bolster its case.³³ It begins with the Senate report associated with the 1947

²⁶ In that same section of the opinion, the ALJ described as “patently absurd” the notion that Congress would authorize the use of eminent domain to develop a pipeline to serve a liquefied natural gas import/export facility yet deny the use of eminent domain for the actual import/export facility itself. Tenneco Atl. Pipeline Co., 1 FERC ¶ 63,025, 65,204 (1977). Of course, that is exactly what the law currently does. Compare 15 U.S.C. § 717b (no provision for eminent domain) with 15 U.S.C. § 717f(h) (providing for eminent domain). Accordingly, it might be worth taking with a grain of salt the ALJ’s conclusion that Congress obviously intended the condemnation authority in section 7(h) to apply to state lands.

²⁷ Islander East Pipeline Co., 102 FERC ¶ 61,054, at P 123 (2003).

²⁸ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 39.

²⁹ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 111 n.19.

³⁰ Id.

³¹ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 38 (recognizing that the holding in Islander East was “terse,” but asserting that being light on analysis “does not . . . obviate the validity of th[e] final holding”).

³² In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 111 n.19.

³³ Cf. Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., Inc., 545 U.S. 546, 568 (2005) (“Judicial investigation of legislative history has a tendency to become, to borrow Judge legislation that added section 7(h) to the NGA. It contends that the Senate report demonstrates that section 7(h) reflected a generalized concern about states' ability to invade the Commission's jurisdiction or "nullif[y]" its determinations—which, according to the majority, supports the conclusion that Congress plainly intended section 7(h) to apply to state lands.³⁴

15. That is quite a leap. In fact, the Senate report indicates that a particular, relatively narrow concern motivated Congress to add section 7(h): Providing a federal right of eminent domain for pipeline developers that were ineligible to utilize state eminent domain laws. The report begins by noting that, because section 7 did not contain an eminent domain provision, certificate holders at the time were required to utilize state eminent domain laws.³⁵ However, the report explains, an interstate pipeline may not qualify for eminent domain under certain state laws because, for example, the pipeline traverses the state without delivering gas, which can mean that it does not provide the "public use" needed to justify eminent domain under state law³⁶ or because certain states outright prohibit the exercise of eminent domain authority by "foreign" (i.e., out-of-state) corporations.³⁷ To address that concern, the report proposes to create a federal right of eminent domain, so that certificate holders are not left at the mercy of a patchwork of state eminent domain laws.³⁸ But the report says nothing about the scope of that federal right of eminent domain or the entities against which it can be exercised.³⁹ Leventhal's memorable phrase, an exercise in 'looking over a crowd and picking out your friends.'" (quoting Patricia Wald, Some Observations on the Use of Legislative History in the 1981 Supreme Court Term, 68 Iowa L. Rev. 195, 214 (1983))).

³⁴ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 41.

³⁵ S. Rep. 80-429, at 2 (1947).

³⁶ Id. (discussing Shedd v. Northern Indiana Public Service Company, 188 N.E. 322 (Ind. 1934)); id. (collecting other cases to the same effect).

³⁷ Id. (explaining that Arkansas and Wisconsin prohibit the use of eminent domain by companies that are not registered corporations within the state).

³⁸ Id. at 3.

³⁹ If anything, aspects of the report could suggest that the committee may not have believed that section 7(h) would apply state-owned lands at all. For example, in enumerating the problems with relying on state eminent domain laws, the report notes that, under Arkansas's Constitution, "a foreign corporation shall not have the power to condemn private property." Id. at 2 (emphasis added). One could infer that the focus on private property indicates that private lands were all the senators had in mind at the time,

16. In addition, a careful reading of the report indicates that the committee was also concerned about another particular and relatively narrow way in which state decisions might interfere with or invade Commission jurisdiction. The report explains that natural gas pipelines frequently transport gas long distances between producing regions and consuming markets, often crossing multiple intervening states without delivering gas for consumption in those states.⁴⁰ The report further explains that the Commission certifies the transport of gas “from points of supply to certain defined and limited markets” and that this defined certification of transportation service from point A to point B would be “nullified” if the intervening states could condition eminent domain authority on the pipeline also delivering gas to points C, D, and E along the way.⁴¹ Once again, nothing about that defined problem—states seeking to force interstate natural gas pipelines to deliver gas within their borders—or Congress’s solution—a federal right of eminent domain—says anything about the scope of that federal right of eminent domain or the entities against which it can be exercised.⁴²

17. The majority then turns to discuss the divergent evolution of the eminent domain provisions under the NGA and the Federal Power Act (FPA).⁴³ And, to be fair, the majority is on relatively stronger ground here. As today’s order explains, the Energy Policy Act of 1992 amended the FPA to limit the exercise of eminent domain against state lands without making a corresponding change to section 7(h).⁴⁴ From that, the majority concludes that “Congress did not intend for condemnations under NGA section 7(h) to be subject to the restrictions Congress later imposed in amendments to FPA section 21.”⁴⁵ The implication, as I understand it, is that because Congress limited the although, unlike the majority, I am hesitant to find clear congressional intent based on circumstantial inferences alone.

⁴⁰ Id. at 3.

⁴¹ Id. at 4 (“If a State may require such interstate natural-gas pipe lines to serve markets within that State as a condition to exercising the right of eminent domain, then it is obvious that the orders of the Federal Power Commission may be nullified.”).

⁴² Cf. In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 113 n.20 (“As for the legislative history, it demonstrates that Congress intended to give gas companies the federal eminent domain power. . . . But it says nothing about Congress’s intent to allow suits against the States.” (citing S. Rep. No. 80-429, at 2-3)).

⁴³ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at PP 42-43.

⁴⁴ Id. P 43.

⁴⁵ Id.

power to condemn state land under section 21 of the FPA, such limits must have been necessary and because Congress did not similarly limit the power to condemn state land under section 7(h) of the NGA, that power must be unlimited.⁴⁶

18. That is one plausible interpretation, but it is hardly the only one. It is equally possible that Congress did not modify NGA section 7(h) because, for whatever reason, it did not believe that section 7(h) presented the same concerns. Although my colleagues may think that Congress would have been wrong in reaching that judgment, that opinion tells us relatively little about Congress's actual motivations. In any case, the fact that Congress subsequently sought to limit the scope of eminent domain under the FPA sheds little light on what Congress intended when it enacted section 7(h) of the NGA roughly 45 years earlier.⁴⁷

19. In addition, the Third Circuit posited another reason why Congress might have added this language when amending the FPA in 1992: "When Congress passed the NGA and [section 7(h)] in 1938 and 1947, respectively, Congress was legislating under the consensus that it could not abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity pursuant to the Commerce Clause."⁴⁸ The Energy Policy Act of 1992, by contrast, was enacted during a brief period in which the Supreme Court held that Congress could abrogate state sovereign immunity pursuant to its Commerce Clause powers, giving Congress a reason to explicitly limit eminent domain against state lands.⁴⁹ It is possible that, in addressing the FPA in 1992, Congress saw fit to provide newly relevant limits on eminent domain—limits that it did not, for whatever reason, apply to section 7 of the NGA, which the Energy Policy Act of 1992 did not modify.

20. The majority attempts to cast doubt on that possibility by noting that the relevant committee report for the Energy Policy Act of 1992 does not discuss the Supreme Court's sovereign immunity jurisprudence.⁵⁰ Although it is true that the report does not mention

⁴⁶ Id. PP 43-44.

⁴⁷ See Mackey v. Lanier Collection Agency & Serv., Inc., 486 U.S. 825, 840 (1988) ("[T]he views of a subsequent Congress form a hazardous basis for inferring the intent of an earlier one." (quoting United States v. Price, 361 U.S. 304, 313 (1960))); accord Sullivan v. Finkelstein, 496 U.S. 617, 632 (1990) (Scalia, J., concurring in part) ("Arguments based on subsequent legislative history, like arguments based on antecedent futurity, should not be taken seriously.").

⁴⁸ PennEast, 938 F.3d at 113 n.20 (internal quotation marks omitted).

⁴⁹ Id.

⁵⁰ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 43.

the Supreme Court’s sovereign immunity cases, the absence of any such discussion hardly proves that those cases were irrelevant to Congress’s thinking. As the Supreme Court has explained, when using legislative history to “ascertain[] the meaning of a statute, [we] cannot, in the manner of Sherlock Holmes,” find clear meaning in “the theory of the dog that did not bark.”⁵¹

21. Finally, the majority asserts that this relationship between the eminent domain provisions in the NGA and FPA is of paramount importance because the Supreme Court “directly addressed the question whether a hydroelectric licensee may condemn state land pursuant to a license granted under FPA section 21” in City of Tacoma v. Taxpayers of Tacoma.⁵² Except that it didn’t. In City of Tacoma, the Court held that section 313(b) of the FPA provided the “specific, complete and exclusive mode for judicial review of the Commission’s orders,”⁵³ that the issues then before the Court—which arose on appeal from a decision of the Supreme Court of Washington⁵⁴—could only have been properly raised in an appeal pursuant to section 313(b), and that those issues were, in fact, raised in such an appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit (Ninth Circuit).⁵⁵ City of Tacoma is a case about the procedures for judicial review of Commission action, not the scope of eminent domain authority under the FPA. Accordingly, the fact that the Supreme Court was not, in the majority’s judgment, “alarm[ed]” by the prospect of eminent domain against state lands⁵⁶ is of no real help in deciding the issues before us today.

22. The majority also points, albeit briefly, to the Ninth Circuit⁵⁷ case referenced in City of Tacoma and the Supreme Court’s earlier decision in First Iowa Hydro-Electric Cooperative v. Federal Power Commission.⁵⁸ But, once again, neither case squarely addresses the scope of the relevant eminent domain authority. Instead, both cases stand ⁵¹ Harrison v. PPG Indus., Inc., 446 U.S. 578, 592 (1980) (citing Arthur Conan Doyle, The Silver Blaze, in The Complete Sherlock Holmes (1938)).

⁵² Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 45.

⁵³ City of Tacoma v. Taxpayers of Tacoma, 357 U.S. 320, 336 (1958).

⁵⁴ Id. at 332-333.

⁵⁵ Id. at 339.

⁵⁶ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 47.

⁵⁷ State of Wash. Dep’t of Game v. FPC, 207 F.2d 391 (9th Cir. 1953).

⁵⁸ 328 U.S. 152 (1946).

for a single clear proposition: That “state laws cannot prevent the Federal Power Commission from issuing a license or bar the licensee from acting under the license to build a dam on a navigable stream since the stream is under the dominion of the United States.”⁵⁹ That conclusion, which would appear to be a relatively straightforward application of the Supremacy Clause,⁶⁰ says nothing about the scope of the eminent domain authority in FPA section 21. The majority implies that the Ninth Circuit must have approved of the exercise of eminent domain against state property because the licensee in that case, the City of Tacoma, intended to exercise that authority.⁶¹ But whatever the court may have thought about such an exercise of eminent domain is irrelevant, since the question before the court was whether a subdivision of a state could act contrary to state law if it was doing so pursuant to a federal license—a question that the court answered in the affirmative, without addressing its implications for eminent domain.⁶²

23. It bears repeating that I am not certain whether Congress intended section 7(h) of the NGA to apply to state lands or not. The evidence simply is not clear one way or the other. I have gone through the foregoing discussion to highlight the extent to which the Commission has misconstrued the evidence or ignored the limits of the authority on which it relies. I appreciate that my colleagues disagree with the conclusion reached by the Third Circuit and that some badly want to see it overturned. But that disagreement, profound as it may be, does not excuse the ends-oriented reasoning in today’s order, which is both deeply troubling and, frankly, a discredit to the agency.

24. Finally, the majority concludes by asserting that the Third Circuit’s decision will “have profoundly adverse impacts on the development of the nation’s interstate natural gas transportation system.”⁶³ That discussion is, frankly, the most honest part of today’s order, as it reflects the majority’s belief that the Third Circuit’s decision is a bad outcome. But it is not clear just how “profound[]” or “adverse” those effects will actually turn out to be. That question depends on a number of factors that are difficult to predict in a vacuum.

25. For one thing, the primary effect of the Third Circuit’s ruling may be to encourage pipeline developers to undertake greater efforts to cooperate and coordinate with the ⁵⁹ 207 F.2d at 396-97 (citing First Iowa).

⁶⁰ E.g., id.

⁶¹ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 47.

⁶² 207 F.2d at 396.

⁶³ Order, 170 FERC ¶ 61,064 at P 56.

relevant states—not necessarily a bad outcome. And, moreover, it is not clear that requiring such coordination would represent an insuperable obstacle to pipeline development. After all, until recently, the Commission interpreted section 401 of the Clean Water Act⁶⁴ to create essentially the same type of state-level veto authority that the majority now sees in the Third Circuit’s decision.⁶⁵ And, notwithstanding that effective veto, the development of interstate pipelines did not exactly grind to a halt.⁶⁶

26. And we must not forget that Congress can have the last say. If Congress disapproves of the Third Circuit’s decision, it can step in and remedy the situation.⁶⁷ Congress has a long and well-documented history of responding to judicial decisions with which it disagrees, including decisions involving state sovereign immunity and the ⁶⁵ See Hoopa Valley Tribe v. FERC, 913 F.3d 1099, 1104 (D.C. Cir. 2019) (explaining that the “withdrawal-and-resubmission scheme” that the Commission had previously interpreted to be consistent with the Clean Water Act and the FPA was invalid because it would allow for the “indefinite[] delay [of] federal licensing proceedings and undermine FERC’s jurisdiction”).

⁶⁴ 33 U.S.C. § 1341(a)(1) (2018).

⁶⁶ In 2017 and 2018, roughly 1,500 miles of interstate natural gas pipelines entered service with a combined capacity of 25 billion cubic feet per day (Bcf/d). FERC, 2018 State of the Markets Report 7 (Apr. 2019), available at <https://www.ferc.gov/market-assessments/reports-analyses/st-mkt-ovr/2018-A-3-report.pdf> (“Over 13 Bcf/d and 689 miles of Commission-jurisdictional pipeline capacity entered service during 2018.”); FERC, 2017 State of the Markets Report 4 (Apr. 2018), available at <https://www.ferc.gov/market-assessments/reports-analyses/st-mkt-ovr/2017-som-A-3-full.pdf> (“Nearly 12 Billion Cubic Feet per day (Bcf/d) and 773 miles of Commission-jurisdictional natural gas pipeline capacity went into service in 2017.”). The combined total capacity of those pipelines is equivalent to nearly a third of U.S. natural gas consumption. See U.S. Energy Info. Admin., Short-Term Energy Outlook (Jan. 2020), available at https://www.eia.gov/outlooks/steo/pdf/steo_full.pdf (“Total domestic U.S. natural gas consumption averaged an estimated 85.3 billion cubic feet per day (Bcf/d) in 2019.”).

⁶⁷ See Lamie v. U.S. Trustee, 540 U.S. 526, 542 (2004) (“If Congress enacted into law something different from what it intended, then it should amend the statute to conform it to its intent.”); Hamilton v. Lanning, 560 U.S. 505, 537 (2010) (Scalia, J., dissenting) (“But it is in the hard cases, even more than the easy ones, that we should faithfully apply our settled interpretive principles, and trust that Congress will correct the law if what it previously prescribed is wrong.”); Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 317 (1989) (White, J., concurring in part and concurring in the judgment) (“If we are wrong . . . , Congress can of course correct us.”).

Eleventh Amendment.⁶⁸ If the Third Circuit’s decision stands, Congress could, for example, amend section 7(h) of the NGA, attempt to validly abrogate state sovereign immunity under the NGA, or pursue measures, such as the “work-around” contemplated by the Third Circuit,⁶⁹ to facilitate pipeline developers’ efforts to acquire rights-of-way over state land.

For these reasons, I respectfully dissent.

Richard Glick
Commissioner

⁶⁸ Matthew R. Christiansen & William N. Eskridge, Jr., Congressional Overrides of Supreme Court Statutory Interpretation Decisions, 1967-2011, 92 Tex. L. Rev. 1317, 1445 & n.453(2014) (explaining that Congress responded to the Supreme Court’s decision in Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234 (1985), by explicitly abrogating state sovereign immunity not just in the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the statute at issue in Atascadero, but also in a handful other statutes).

⁶⁹ In re PennEast, 938 F.3d at 113.