Question: Which Delaware organist held seminars on music for services at Lutheran, Presbyterian, Jewish, Methodist, and Baptist churches, because a good organist had to be able to fill in anywhere?

Clue: He taught both his daughters to play the organ and they also became local church organists.

Answer: "Paul Terry was one of the great church organists and teachers of the organ in Delaware. He joined the Cathedral Church of St. John in October 1929 as organist and choirmaster and during the next thirty-one years taught scores of future organists their trade."
