April Campbell, M.Ed, ECMPWT

Positive social-emotional development is recognized now more than ever as the cornerstone of success in school and in life—which means every early childhood professional must be ready to support children's social and emotional health.

In this complimentary, interactive hands-on workshop we will look at how young children experience, regulate, and express emotions, how they form secure relationships, and how families and caregivers shape a child's development.

We will also explore the components of healthy social emotional development in young children, learning strategies to promote healthy development and self-regulation.
